Married At First Sight Chapter 3509-“When did Mr. York arrive?” Kathryn asked.

Hayden replied, “He got here not long ago. We heard you were in the hospital, so he came with us to see you.”

Zachary had told Serenity he was going on a business trip, but he had actually come to Jensburg. He planned to return to Wiltspoon only after assessing the situation in Jensburg and discussing the next steps with Liberty. It would take just two or three days. He couldn't stay too long, fearing Serenity might find out.

Kathryn smiled, “Mr. York is very considerate.”

Strictly speaking, Kathryn was a few years younger than Zachary, but since she was Serenity's aunt, she was Zachary's elder. Zachary should call her aunt. It's customary for the younger generation to visit their elders out of respect, even if everyone knows the underlying reasons.

If Kathryn hadn't tipped off Liberty, the people in Wiltspoon wouldn't be so friendly to her. Even if they were, they would remain wary of her. Kathryn understood this; if she were in their shoes, she wouldn't handle things as well as the people in Wiltspoon.

“Then I'll wait for you,” Kathryn said.

“Okay, see you later,” Hayden replied, ending the call.

Kathryn turned to Pedro, “Let's eat quickly. Miss Queen and the others are on their way to the hospital. Did you know Zachary is here?”

Pedro responded, “I heard about it just now. Mr. York keeps a low profile when he arrives; I didn't want to worry you.”

Kathryn was silent for a moment, then said, “Although my mom hasn't made any moves, the more people from Wiltspoon come, the more nervous and worried I become. After all, she's my biological mother. I still hope she's well, but...”

Killing must be paid for with a life. Her mom had killed her aunt's family and didn't even spare her aunt. To climb to the top, her hands were stained with blood. After reaching the top, she didn't treat her family well, causing dissatisfaction among everyone. Even though forty or fifty years had passed, the previous events might not sentence her mom to death, but they could ruin her reputation. Kathryn wasn't on the same page as her mom and worried that when the day of reckoning came, her mom, who had been strong all her life, might choose an extreme way out.

Pedro said, “What is destined to happen will happen, and you can't escape it.”

“I want to make amends for my mom, but it doesn’t work. She doesn’t want to make amends. I just want her to find peace,” Kathryn sighed again. “Let it be. I’ve done my best as a daughter.”

“Let’s eat,” she added, as Hayden and the others were coming, and Kathryn wouldn’t be able to eat once they arrived.

Married At First Sight Chapter 3510

Married At First Sight Chapter 3510-Meanwhile, at the Farrell family mansion, the atmosphere had been tense, with a particularly low air pressure. Everyone moved cautiously, not daring to make noise for fear of angering Clarissa.

Clarissa hadn’t returned to the company, staying at home instead. Sometimes she sat on the sofa in a daze; other times, she stayed in the study all day. The butler brought her meals to the study, but she ate very little. He wanted to persuade her but didn’t dare.

It was known that every time Mr. Dunn visited, Clarissa’s expression became more solemn. Some family members had been causing trouble lately, and Clarissa either ignored them or scolded them harshly, even having bodyguards teach them a lesson. This rough handling made her even more unpopular, deepening the resentment.

Mr. Dunn arrived again, and the butler invited him in, watching him go upstairs as if he owned the place. The butler sighed inwardly.

Holden, Clarissa’s husband, didn’t have such freedom, even though they had children together. Clarissa trusted Mr. Dunn more; he was her lifelong assistant. Holden had lost his status in Clarissa’s eyes due to his affair. If not for the children, they might have divorced.

Mr. Dunn went straight to the study, knocked on the door, and entered after Clarissa responded. Clarissa was practicing calligraphy.

Mr. Dunn observed her writing, “What are you working on?”

Clarissa replied, “My calligraphy.”

“Madam, you’re distracted, and it shows in your writing. You should stop and not waste the pen and ink.”

Mr. Dunn was the only one who could speak so frankly to Clarissa, and he was right. Clarissa was restless, her thoughts elsewhere. Her calligraphy was poor, wasting materials.

Clarissa's face darkened, and she made a mistake with the last word. Frustrated, she threw the brush on the table, ruining a piece that took a long time to write. Mr. Dunn handed her a tissue to wipe her hands and cleaned up the mess. After a while, Clarissa sat on the sofa.

After tidying up, Mr. Dunn asked, "What's the current situation?"

"The eldest young master of the York family is here. He arrived not long ago and is going to the hospital to visit the young lady."

Clarissa was silent, then sarcastically said, "She betrayed her biological mother in exchange for someone else's visit. Is it worth it? No matter how many bad things I've done, I am still her mother. Can't she put aside morals and side with me? If it weren't for her tip-off, our plan wouldn't have failed. When I see her, I want to strangle her."

She hated Shiloh's biological father even more. If he hadn't swapped the two children, Kathryn would have grown up under her care, becoming better than Liberty and Serenity, and more loyal.

Mr. Dunn knew Clarissa was harsh with everyone but could never be harsh with her only biological daughter. If the three young masters had done such a thing, they'd be dead by now. But the young lady was fine, only slapped twice by Shiloh.

Compared to losing her life, being slapped twice was nothing.

Mr. Dunn sighed, "The young lady's values are set. It's difficult to change them. Ma'am, if you want to succeed, either put the young lady and Pedro under house arrest or let the young lady continue to sleep, though that's unlikely. Now, the young lady is guarding against you."

Clarissa wanted to kill Kathryn, but she was her only daughter. If she had another daughter, she wouldn't tolerate Kathryn's betrayal.

"Is the gasoline ready?" Clarissa asked.

Mr. Dunn replied, "Yes, we are prepared. We're waiting for Audrey and the others to come and confront you. When everyone is together, we can execute the plan."

Clarissa's eyes turned cold. "When Audrey brings him here to confront me, ensure Kathryn and Pedro do not appear."

She wanted to die with Audrey and the others, along with her enemies in the Farrell family. She just wanted to save her only daughter, Kathryn, and Pedro, as Kathryn needed him.
