

Read the latest chapter Married At First Sight Chapter 3644 here

Married At First Sight Chapter 3644

Married At First Sight Chapter 3644 – Sitting in the car, Kathryn's neck still ached, but she found it easier to sleep, perhaps because Pedro's presence made her feel safe.

As long as Pedro was with her, she felt secure, no matter what challenges came their way.

Liberty often said that Pedro loved Kathryn deeply, and Kathryn had started to feel the same way about him. Liberty had advised her not to dismiss Pedro's feelings, and not to focus only on having a child without considering Pedro's role as a father, so as not to hurt him.

Regardless of what happened between Kathryn and Liberty, Liberty's advice was meant to guide her in love.

Kathryn had come to realize that she loved Pedro. It was hard not to fall for someone as remarkable as him.

When Pedro noticed Kathryn had fallen asleep, he pulled over, removed his coat, and gently placed it over her. Even with the car's heater on, it was cold enough that she might catch a chill while sleeping.

He watched her quietly for a moment, leaned over, kissed her softly on the cheek, then sat back up and continued driving, taking Kathryn back to his place.

Meanwhile, Liberty and others received word from Silver Fox that Kathryn had been knocked unconscious by Clarissa and taken away.

"I can't believe Clarissa, who cares so much for her only daughter, actually planned an escape route for her," Audrey remarked sarcastically.

Mrs. Queen added, "No matter how ruthless Clarissa is, she's still a mother. The Farrell family has always valued daughters over sons. She adored Shiloh, even though she wasn't her biological daughter. Kathryn is her real daughter, and with Shiloh gone, it's no surprise she made sure Kathryn had a way out."

Audrey nodded. "That's true. It's just human nature."

If something happened to the Stone family, she would also do everything in her power to protect her children.

Audrey then turned to Liberty. "Liberty, go back to the company now and later visit the Farrell Group. Say you want to see Kathryn and observe how the Farrell family reacts. They've likely set up a double for her."

Liberty replied, "They'll probably try to show me the double or refuse to meet me. But yes, Aunt, I'm heading back to the company now."

Liberty returned to work, as if everything were normal, waiting for the Farrell family dinner later that evening.

On her way back to the office, Liberty received a video call from Serenity. Since she had a bodyguard driving, she could take the call without distraction.

When the call connected, she saw Sonny's little face. Despite everything happening in Jensburg, it was still early, and Sonny was having breakfast.

He was happily munching on a bun shaped like an animal, one of Titus's favorites. Whenever Titus returned to FC Manor, the pastry chef would make these animal-shaped buns that the children loved.

"Mom," Sonny called out sweetly when he saw Liberty, waving with his free hand.

Before Liberty could respond, he added, "Mom, the buns at Titus's house are delicious and cute. They're shaped like little rabbits. I'm eating one now."

Liberty smiled. "Then have a couple more, sweetheart. Make sure you're full. Eat on your own, don't let your aunt feed you. When I get back, I'll make some buns for you too."

Liberty used to run her own breakfast shop, where she baked buns, though she hadn't made them into animal shapes before. But now, she figured it wouldn't be too hard to make some bunny-shaped buns for Sonny.