

Married At First Sight Chapter 3716

Married At First Sight Chapter 3716 – Pedro nodded and said, “When Mrs. Farrell asked me to come, she told me to take you and all her assets, leave Jensburg, and start fresh somewhere where no one knows us.”

He also believed Clarissa had later revised her will.

“Mr. Fraser, I want to leave part of my mother’s inheritance to my three brothers for their future, and give the rest as compensation to my cousins. Do you think this is the right thing to do?”

“My mother wronged my aunt, and my cousin’s tragedy was indirectly caused by her. As her daughter, I feel it’s my duty to pay off those debts for her. I also want to compensate the families of those who knew about the murder my mother committed. She’s gone now, and I don’t want to argue whether she was right or wrong.”

Kathryn spoke softly, “I just want to do what I can to make peace with it.”

Pedro said, “No matter what you decide, I support you. Your well-being is my priority. If you need anything, just ask.”

Seeing Pedro’s loyalty, Kathryn trusted him even more. She had developed feelings for him and didn’t want to repeat her parents’ mistakes.

“Mr. Fraser, please start calling me by my name, not ‘Miss.’ Soon, I won’t be part of the Farrell family anymore, and none of this will have anything to do with me. If my cousin Audrey can’t accept me, I’ll move my business out of Jensburg.”

“After leaving, I’ll only return to Jensburg for the Lantern Festival to honor my mother. Other than that, I’ll stay away to avoid making my cousins unhappy.”

As Pedro started driving, he said, “I doubt Mrs. Stone and the others will push you out of Jensburg. Your business is here, and as long as they don’t target you, you don’t need to leave.”

Audrey and the others still had a good opinion of Kathryn, though Clarissa’s past actions created some distance.

“Mrs. Farrell is gone, and you’re not responsible for what happened decades ago. At that time, she wasn’t even married yet. Let’s see how things unfold in Wiltspoon.”

Kathryn pressed her lips together and said, “I know they won’t force me to leave, but I’d feel too ashamed to stay. Not just around my cousins, but everyone in the clan. If my cousins hadn’t stepped in, and my mother’s plan had succeeded, many lives would’ve been lost. That night, the clan members she invited were all capable people, and my mother couldn't stand their success."

Even if her mother wanted to clear the path for her, Kathryn couldn't condone what she did to the clan.

"I'll take it one step at a time. If I do stay, I won't be in the city center. I'll focus on running my company. My dad doesn't agree with me giving away what's in the Farrell family, but it doesn't belong to me. What I'm giving away is what my mom took from my aunt and passed on to my cousin."

"I can't be as indifferent as my mom. Besides, with my abilities, I can't compete with my cousin and their supporters. They have too many powerful connections."

Kathryn added, "When I first met my cousin, I told her that once the truth was revealed, I would return what wasn't mine. I meant it, and I'll follow through."

Married At First Sight Chapter 3717

Married At First Sight Chapter 3717 – Pedro repeated himself: "Kathryn, no matter what you decide, I will support you completely. Even if you don't take over the Farrell family business, your own private assets are impressive, and your companies are doing very well."

Pedro was aware of Kathryn's private holdings and how her companies were thriving. Even after she returned to the Farrell family, she rarely checked in on them, yet they continued to run smoothly.

The woman Pedro vowed to protect for life was truly remarkable. She didn't need to inherit her family's wealth—her own hard work was enough to build her success.

What Pedro admired most was Kathryn's confidence.

"You'll always have me," Pedro added.

With him by her side, Kathryn's success would only grow.

Kathryn looked at him for a long time and smiled.

"When I first came back, I regretted it. I thought I shouldn't have returned to the Farrell family because I didn't fit in. But when you came into my life, I was glad I switched places with Shiloh. Otherwise, you would have ended up with her. Pedro, I'm so glad you're mine!"

She could let go of the Farrell family, but she wanted to keep Pedro.

Pedro smiled, "This is our destiny."

Kathryn continued, "Yes, it is. When all of this is over, Pedro, shall we get married?"

They hadn't gone through a traditional courtship or spoken romantic words, but they knew how they felt about each other.

Pedro's smile deepened, and he said, "First, I'll propose, then we'll get engaged. After some time, if you're still sure, we'll get married. I just don't want you to meet someone better and regret choosing me."

They didn't need to discuss love like other couples—they understood each other perfectly.

Pedro was confident but still wanted to give Kathryn time to think.

Kathryn thought for a moment and said, "Since you're not in a rush, let's date like a normal couple first. If you don't find someone else and I don't change my mind, we can get engaged and then married.

You don't need to stick with me all the time. You can meet other women and see if someone else catches your eye. If you like someone at a social event, go after her. I won't stand in your way."

At most, she'd feel hurt, but if that happened, she'd simply stop believing in love and wouldn't want to marry. She didn't have to follow the Farrell family rules or have a daughter to continue the legacy. She could remain single and raise a child on her own.

Pedro responded seriously, "Kathryn, I would never do that. You are the only one in my heart. No matter how amazing other women may be, that's their business, not mine. I only care about you.

Don't say things like that. If you don't want to marry me, I'll still be your assistant for life. But please don't push me toward other women. We assistants don't marry unless it's with the person we serve. It's a rule I must follow, whether or not you become the head of the family."

Kathryn had her own rules to follow.

Pedro had his as well. If he broke them, he'd be hunted down by the base.

After more than 20 years of training, Pedro knew how powerful the base was. If he ever crossed the line, no one could save him—not even the gods.

He wasn't willing to take that risk.

Married At First Sight Chapter 3718

Married At First Sight Chapter 3718 – Pedro had been trained for loyalty since childhood, and it was deeply ingrained in him. He had always said that his life belonged to Kathryn, both in life and in death.

“Okay, I shouldn’t have said that,” Kathryn responded calmly.

Pedro had shown his loyalty many times, so it made sense that he would be upset by her words.

“Let’s just let things happen naturally, Pedro. We don’t need to force anything,” Kathryn added.

She wasn’t young anymore, and if she wanted to get married, it was the right time. Pedro, a few years older than her, was in his early thirties.

Kathryn thought that if they really did get married, they could get their marriage certificate after the new year and have a baby the following year, fulfilling that part of their lives and focusing on their careers.

“Pedro,” Kathryn suddenly asked, “Do you know how to take care of a baby?”

Pedro hesitated and said, “Well, I’ve never done it before, but it shouldn’t be that hard.”

Kathryn wondered if they were thinking about having a baby too soon. “After we have a baby, you might need to be the nanny for a while. I’ll be busy with work. You can’t help with the pregnancy, but you can help with the baby.”

Pedro smiled. “No problem, I’ll be the nanny, and you can be the breadwinner.”

Kathryn smiled too. “We won’t lack the money to raise the baby. I just want my company to keep growing. As the business expands, one of us will need to make sacrifices for the family. When the baby starts kindergarten, we’ll get a break. Do you prefer a son or a daughter?”

Pedro replied, “As long as it’s our child, I’ll love them, boy or girl. I won’t favor one over the other, and you shouldn’t feel pressured about it.”

“I don’t feel pressured about having a son. I used to worry about having a daughter, but not anymore. Now, I’m free from that burden.”

Kathryn leaned back, feeling liberated. She wouldn’t be taking over the Farrell family, which meant she didn’t have to follow their rules.

As she looked out the window, she noticed a familiar car passing by in the opposite lane. She turned her head to follow it.

Pedro asked, “What’s wrong?”

“Check if that car belongs to my eldest brother. If it does, my dad must have called him. But it doesn’t matter—my brother can’t control me.”

Kathryn was sometimes grateful she didn’t grow up with her biological parents and didn’t have strong emotional ties to them. It allowed her the freedom to do as she pleased without feeling obligated to her family.

If she had grown up with them, it would have been harder to make decisions independently, and she would have had to consider her father and brothers’ feelings.

Meanwhile, Marco was on his way to the hospital, confused about why Holden had called him there. He wondered if his father’s condition had worsened. The doctor had said the bullet was removed, and Holden’s life wasn’t in danger, despite some blood loss.

Marco didn’t want to lose his father after already losing his mother. When he arrived at the hospital, he parked his car and rushed into the ward.

He saw Holden sitting up with a pillow behind him, and the servant was washing some grapes. Relieved, Marco asked, “Dad, why did you call me in such a hurry? I thought something had happened to you.”

The servant greeted Marco respectfully and said, “The young lady just left.”

Marco was surprised. “Kathryn was here?”

Since Holden was injured, Kathryn hadn’t visited, and Marco thought she didn’t care about their father.

Married At First Sight Chapter 3719

Married At First Sight Chapter 3719 – Holden signaled for the servant to leave.

He then told Marco to watch the servant exit. Once the servant was gone, Marco closed the door to the ward, sat back down, and grabbed a few grapes from the fruit plate.

“Dad, has Kathryn said anything about taking over?” Marco asked.

Since his mother’s death, Marco believed it was time for Kathryn to step up.

“The whole company is waiting. I don’t know what her plan is. Even though we’re not at war, a company is like a kingdom. Just like a kingdom can’t go without a ruler for a day, we can’t run the company without a leader,” Marco said.

Holden frowned and replied bitterly, “Don’t even talk about her taking over. Kathryn doesn’t see things the way we do. She upset your mother countless times while she was alive. If she weren’t her biological daughter, we’d have buried her by now.

Kathryn wants to return everything that belongs to the Farrell family, including your mother’s estate. She even said she’d give it away to Audrey and others. Can you believe how foolish she is?”

Marco shouted, “How is that possible! I understand if she doesn’t want to take over the family, but my mother’s estate belongs to all of us. She doesn’t get to decide that on her own.

She’s way too generous. If she wants to compensate those people, she should use her own money, not ours.

Dad, didn’t you stop her? Sure, my mother became head of the family after my aunt’s death, but she held that position for decades and named a successor. Now that she’s gone, it’s Kathryn’s responsibility to take over. But you’re right, Dad—Kathryn’s not on our side.”

Marco felt a burning desire to confront Kathryn.

Holden added, “Exactly. And she even had the nerve to warn me. She said your mom shot me because she didn’t want me to pressure her with demands. Plus, your mom made a will, but I have no idea if she later changed it. If she left everything to Kathryn, we won’t get a dime.”

Thinking about that, Holden cursed Clarissa, who had only just died, in his mind.

She had hurt a lot of people.

Marco reassured him, “Dad, don’t worry. My mother was the biological mother of all three of us brothers. She wouldn’t change her will to leave everything to Kathryn. I’ll go ask Lawyer Tait if the will was changed. If not, we’ll divide it as originally planned.”

Still, Marco realized that even with the original plan, Kathryn would inherit more than they would.

He cursed Kathryn again, but only in front of Holden, never to her face. He knew Kathryn was just like his mother in some ways.

Married At First Sight Chapter 3720

Married At First Sight Chapter 3720 – Marco still felt shaken when he remembered that night. Thankfully, Clarissa’s pistol only had a few bullets; otherwise, she might have shot them. Clarissa always favored Kathryn as if she were her own child.

“I hope not,” Holden said. “But Marco, I don’t think they’ve made any decisions yet. The New Year is around the corner, and the company will be on break soon. Everything will be decided after the New Year. In the meantime, you and your brothers should take advantage of your positions at the company and secure as much as you can.

Also, go back to the mansion quickly. Your mother had a lot of valuable jewelry. Make sure to take it all, along with any other valuable items in the house.

You don’t need to worry about the bigger items. Every head of the Farrell family lives in the mansion, and some things are fixed and can’t be moved. But your mother’s collection of calligraphy, paintings, and antiques are worth a fortune, so you should take them.

Kathryn isn’t bluffing. The four of us—father and sons—may not get any of your mother’s estate. The jewelry, art, and antiques are all we can take for now. Selling them will give us more than enough money to live on for the rest of our lives.”

Holden didn’t know how long his sons would need the money, but for him, it would be plenty. He was in his seventies and figured he had, at most, ten more years. The money from selling those valuables would allow him to live comfortably.

Clarissa’s collection included authentic works from master artists, which were extremely valuable. Her antiques were also worth a lot.

Altogether, selling everything could easily bring in hundreds of millions. Not to mention the jewelry. Even strong women like Clarissa loved jewelry. Many of her pieces were family heirlooms, passed down from previous heads of the Farrell family, making them even more valuable than anything on the market today.

Marco’s eyes lit up at first, but then his face fell. “Dad, we’re not allowed to enter the mansion anymore, except for Kathryn.”

“What do you mean?” Holden asked, shocked.

“Mrs. Stone has stationed guards there and even sent people inside. All the servants have been replaced, and even the butler has been removed,” Marco explained.

Holden was speechless. “Why is she doing that?”

Marco didn’t respond.

Audrey, whose surname was Farrell, was the eldest daughter of the previous Matriarch. She should have been the head of the family, but Marco's mother prevented her from taking over. Now, Audrey was back to reclaim everything.

With Clarissa and Mr. Dunn both dead, the outcome was clear.

The Farrell family was returning to the descendants of the previous Matriarch. Marco and his family no longer had control over the mansion—they were no longer the owners.

Although Audrey or Liberty hadn't officially taken over the family yet, it was almost certain they would.

Even the attitude of the clan members toward them had turned sour.

Marco was furious.

A Farrell clan member had said, "Your mother tried to burn us alive, and you still expect us to welcome you with open arms?"

Holden was livid. His own daughter, Kathryn, wouldn't listen to him and even threatened him. That was one thing, but not being able to take his wife's jewelry, art, and antiques—that was a loss of hundreds of millions!

Holden felt like his heart was bleeding.

Marco, full of regret, said, "We can't take any money from the company—that would be embezzlement, and we'd end up in jail. It's our fault for not listening to you earlier, Dad. If we had, we could have packed everything up and left for home sooner, maybe even gotten more."

It was too late now. Fortunately, they still had some assets and a small business under their name.

They owned a few houses for rent and a handful of stores in their hometown. They could make a living from collecting rent, but their carefree days of spending without limits were over.

When Clarissa was alive, Marco thought she was too strict, always controlling and scolding them. Now that she was gone, he realized life had been better with her around.

Even though she favored Kathryn, she was never unfair to her three sons, especially when it came to material things.