

Married at First Sight Chapter 4387

“Did you notice that unfamiliar face just now? She’s very beautiful, but we’ve never seen her before.”

“There did seem to be a new face. If she’s a beauty, she’s probably the fiancée of one of the young masters.”

Starting with the eldest young master of the Zhan family, several young masters of marriageable age had already married one after another.

The young ladies of Wancheng were heartbroken watching the young masters get married, only to realize the brides were never them.

They didn’t know what standards the Zhan family used to choose their daughters-in-law, leaving them with no chance.

However, they often comforted themselves by thinking of Shang Xiaofei, who had a strong family background and had pursued Zhan Yin for years, yet still hadn’t married into the Zhan family.

Shang Xiaofei: ...Sister has already found someone better suited for me. Jun Ran is no less outstanding than Zhan Yin.

Let them be envious, jealous, and hateful.

Shang Xiaofei had always dared to love and hate, able to take things in stride, living a carefree life. She was simply luckier than them!

“Haitong is really lucky and blessed. Even as a man, I envy her,” someone said.

“Exactly. She just gave birth and was discharged, yet the whole family came to pick her up. Her sister, friends, and even business partners were there. If you didn’t know better, you’d think the queen was leaving the palace.”

Another added, “Haitong is practically living the life of a queen. Once Young Master Zhan officially takes over the Zhan family, she’ll be the mistress of the household—the queen herself.”

“She’s the luckiest woman I’ve ever seen.”

Everyone envied Haitong’s happiness.

Many women had given birth, but none had experienced such a grand scene upon discharge.

Her husband's entire family showed up, along with all her maternal relatives. It wasn't an exaggeration to say she was like the moon surrounded by stars.

In the past, people could still criticize her for having a poor family background, but now her elder sister had become the head of the Feng family in Jiangcheng, and Haitong's biological mother was the daughter of the Feng family's eldest patriarch.

According to the Feng family's rules, Haitong was officially recognized as one of their own.

Thus, her background was no longer lacking in any way.
Thus, her background was not bad at all.

In everyone's eyes, Haitong was like the heroine of a novel—receiving the unwavering love of her husband and gradually growing stronger.

Alas, comparing yourself to others truly invites heartache.

We are all human, so why must there be such divisions among us?

After being discharged from the hospital, Haitong returned to Youyou Villa to recuperate from childbirth.

Meanwhile, Liberty had to return to Jiangcheng. Although she had adapted to managing the Feng family's affairs, she couldn't afford to relax.

Before leaving, she asked her son Yangyang if he wanted to transfer to a school in Jiangcheng in September.

Yangyang asked, "Will Aunt and Little Brother come too?"

Liberty replied, "No, your aunt and little brother will stay in Wancheng. Most of your aunt's business is based there, so she won't leave. But she will visit Jiangcheng occasionally."

The two sisters shared a deep bond, and Hai Tong would definitely fly to Jiangcheng from time to time for family reunions.

Yangyang asked again, "What about Uncle Lu?"

"Uncle Lu will come to Jiangcheng to live with us," Liberty explained.

She squatted down to meet her son's eyes and said gently, "Yangyang, my work is mainly based in Xujiang City. We also have a home there."

"If you want to live with Mom, you'll need to transfer schools to Jiangcheng."

Yangyang hesitated and said, “But if I go to Jiangcheng, I won’t have any friends.”

He already had many friends at his kindergarten.

He couldn’t bear to leave his teacher and classmates behind.

“Mom, can’t you transfer your job back to Wancheng?”
