

Married at First Sight Chapter 4411

Adults prioritize balanced nutrition and are not allowed to be picky eaters.

That eating habit has continued into adulthood, making it hard for them to be as particular as Miss Ouyang.

“The fiancée Grandma chose for the Sixth Young Master must have been selected with great care. Since your Sixth Young Master can handle Miss Ouyang, that’s why your grandma chose her.”

“If he didn’t have that ability, then no matter how much Grandma Zhan admired Miss Ouyang, she wouldn’t have considered her—especially not just to please Prime Minister Sun.”

“I think Grandma Zhan is very self-aware and understands her grandchildren well. She knows exactly what kind of girl suits each of you.”

“Take your eldest brother, for example—he’s cold and indifferent toward women. But Grandma Zhan still pushed him to marry your eldest sister-in-law. She was leveraging his strong sense of duty, knowing that once they were married, he would treat her as his wife.”

“Your eldest brother believes that marriage makes them a couple, so he must fulfill his role as a husband. He’ll pay more attention to your eldest sister-in-law over time, and through daily life and deeper understanding, feelings will naturally grow between them.”

The men of the Zhan family are known for their loyalty and strong sense of responsibility.

Zhan Yin married Haitong in a flash marriage to repay his grandmother’s kindness.

He claimed he wanted to observe whether Haitong was worthy of his lifelong devotion.

But in truth, the deep-rooted sense of responsibility within him made him naturally embrace and protect Haitong.

That same responsibility slowly turned into love.

“Look at your third brother and his wife. Your third sister-in-law is quiet, while your third brother is lively and talkative. When they’re together, they balance each other and never feel bored.”

“Your second brother and his wife also matched well. When they first got together, your second sister-in-law was blind. But your second brother has a kind and gentle temperament. He didn’t mind her condition and was able to accept everything about her.”

“Your grandma is truly an exceptional woman. She loves her grandchildren deeply and always acts in their best interest.”

Grandma Zhan invested a great deal of time and effort into finding the most suitable partners for her grandsons.

Du Yumeng dared to say that Grandma Zhan had likely been planning these matches in secret for years—it wasn’t something that began just recently.

Why did she only start arranging matches for the other grandsons after Young Master Zhan got married? Most likely because they were still too young and not yet mature enough. Young men can come across as impulsive and unreliable, lacking the stability needed to take on family responsibilities.

If they’d been encouraged to pursue marriage too early, their chances of success would have been slim, and they could have easily hurt the hearts of innocent girls due to their immaturity.

Now that the seventh and eighth grandsons are around twenty-three or twenty-four, the old lady isn’t in any rush to pair them off. She’s said they shouldn’t begin romantic relationships until they’re at least twenty-six or twenty-seven.

It’s even possible she’ll delay it another couple of years, until they’re twenty-eight or twenty-nine, before giving them permission to pursue marriage.

After all, Grandma Zhan already has several granddaughters-in-law, and her enthusiasm for matchmaking has waned. Having just become a great-grandmother, she’s ready to take a well-earned break.

Zhan Yiyang smiled and said, “I know how much Grandma loves us. When we were young, our grandparents raised us. Grandma always said that after she retired, she’d have a group of grandchildren to care for her and keep her company in retirement.”

“When our parents were younger, they were busy with work and left us in the care of our grandparents. It was our grandparents who brought us up and taught us so much.”

Both Grandpa and Grandma were highly accomplished individuals who passed down their experience and wisdom to the younger generation, little by little.

Though the brothers may compare themselves with one another, when compared to outsiders, they are all exceptional—true elites.

That’s thanks to the excellent upbringing they received from their grandparents.

“My grandfather was also a wonderful man. It’s just a pity he didn’t live long enough to see us get married and have children. If he had seen my eldest brother become a father, he would have been overjoyed.”

“Grandpa loved my eldest brother the most. He was the first grandson, and that held a special significance.”
