Such a pity, the Goddess had feelings, but King Xiang didn't. Her repeated overtures, confessions, all were rejected by Ling Fangzhou. She had no choice, she had to be honest with her father, begging him to talk to Ling Fangzhou. Her father initially disagreed. Ling Fangzhou was his most proud student, it wasn't that her father didn't approve of Ling Fangzhou, it was that he disapproved of the son Ling Fangzhou's ex-wife had left behind. Her father said, playing the stepmother role was difficult. With her credentials, there were plenty of single, talented, and handsome young men to choose from. But none of them were Ling Fangzhou. She only loved Ling Fangzhou, she dreamed of marrying him. Those who have never experienced love, don't know what love is. Only those who have been in love know that once you recognize the one, he is the only one you see and think about, no one else can replace him. It's like an obsession, like being bewitched.

Ellis's hesitation was all observed by Victoria.

Unable to hold back, Victoria asked, "Ellis, who is this Miss Keira that Miss Allen mentioned? Do you know her?"

If he didn't know her, Rebecca wouldn't have mentioned Ellis just now... Follow current novels on FindNovel.net

Upon hearing this, Ellis immediately fell silent.

Keira, on the other hand, didn't care at all about their feelings and tried to walk past them toward that side, only to be stopped by Ellis.

Ellis looked deeply at Keira. "Keera, Rebecca is currently in an unstable mental state, and I think it's not suitable for you to go over there..."

Keira felt extremely frustrated upon hearing this.

Just as she was about to push past Ellis's obstruction, she heard him say, "But there's someone who's suitable."

Keira was taken aback, "Who?"

Keira Olsen.

Keira was stunned.

Ellis stared at her. "I know, you must have heard the name Keira, and you also know that she's your twin sister. You two look very alike. The reason your existence upset her is all because of Keira. So, can you pretend to be Keira right now and persuade her to come down?"

Keira was speechless.

She was supposed to pretend to be herself?

Keira had no intention to pretend. She just wanted to hurry over and reveal her identity to prevent Rebecca from actually jumping.

Moreover, how could she not be moved by such a frail child as Rebecca, who had gone to such lengths for her?

Seeing Ellis say this, she couldn't be bothered to explain anything and simply nodded. "Alright, can I go over now then?"

Ellis immediately nodded, then glanced at the corner

Ellis immediately nodded, then glanced at the corner of her eye, and swiftly turned to Victoria. "Lend me your eyeliner or eyebrow pencil or something like that."

Keira knew what he intended to do and, after thinking about it, decided not to interfere.

Confused, Victoria looked at the two of them but obediently opened her bag and handed over her makeup for touch-ups to Ellis.

Ellis quickly took out an eyeliner and drew a mole by the corner of Keira's eye, identical to her original one.

Keira was speechless.

After he finished, Ellis took a careful look at her. "Now you look even more like her, go! Oh, and Keira always calls her Rebecca. You should know what to do."

Keira nodded and started to walk over with big strides.

As soon as she rounded a concrete wall, Keira was startled by the scene before her.

No wonder Frankie didn't dare to force a rescue.

Rebecca was currently standing at the edge of the rooftop, the big wind billowing her bridesmaid dress, with the long skirt fluttering up in the breeze, and she looked as if she was about to fall at any moment.

It seemed as though the next gust of wind could carry Rebecca away.

The scene was heart-stopping to witness.

Keira's eyes immediately welled up with tears.

She took a step forward and called out, "Rebecca!"

Rebecca and Frankie turned their heads in unison.

Frankie stood still.

Only then did Rebecca's attentive gaze fall back on Keira.

She scrutinized Keira inch by inch as if trying to see whether she was really Keira.

But the girl's expression was composed and calm, and the clear, cold eyes no longer had Keira's gentleness and timidity; they were Keira's eyes.

Her gaze finally settled again on the corner of Keira's eye.

With a mole under her eye...

Rebecca's face lit up with joy, her gaze uncertain as she looked at her and called out softly, "...Miss Keira?"

It was clear that there was indeed something wrong with her mind...

At that moment, her eyes brimming with tears, and she asked, "Miss Keira?"

Keira immediately nodded.

Rebecca wept for joy, tears rolling down in large drops. "You... you didn't die? Why are you here?"

After uttering these words, she suddenly realized something, and her expression instantly became wary. "The clothes you're wearing... aren't those what Keira wore? Aren't you Keira? How could you be Miss Keira?"

"So, come back..."

Keira reached out. "Come back, okay? I didn't die, and you can't die either..."

“Okay, okay...”

“Okay, okay...”

Rebecca started crying again, reaching out her hand to Keira like a child.

Seeing this, Frankie and Ellis, who had followed, both breathed a sigh of relief.

However, Victoria, who was nearby, frowned upon seeing this scene.

This Keera... was so annoying!

If she really saved Rebecca, then she would have latched onto the Allen family again...
Then there would be one more competitor in Clance!

And, from what Rebecca had just said...

Keera looked a lot like the late Mrs. Horton.

Then wouldn't Lewis Horton be easily seduced by her?

Her own marriage might just fall through!

With this thought, a malicious glint flashed in Victoria's eyes, and she stepped forward, saying, “That's right,

While saying those words, she also took out her makeup bag. “Your makeup has been ruined by tears. Let me help you touch it up. You'll be pretty when we meet the others back downstairs...”

She deliberately took out an eyebrow pencil and shook it in front of Rebecca.

Then she reached out and touched the side of her nose.

Rebecca, watching her actions, suddenly remembered that the makeup artist today mentioned that it was fashionable to draw a mole by the nose.

It made one look sexy.

354 Chapter 353

Victoria looked at her with joy.

If Rebecca fell, she would certainly die. By then, Clance would have one less rich young lady competing with her for Lewis Horton.

Keera would then be blamed for not saving Rebecca, for she had added to Rebecca's distress and suicide, leaving the Allen family with a grudge against Keera.

It was like killing two birds with one stone!

With delight, she looked ahead, only to see a figure darting forward, desperately grabbing Rebecca's arm.

Rebecca herself was swaying precariously in midair.

Keira was lying on the ground, her upper body almost suspended in the air, clutching Rebecca's wrist for dear life.

When Keira seemed about to fall with Rebecca,

Frankie and Ellis arrived. They hurriedly seized her legs.

Only then, with four people holding on, were they able to barely keep Rebecca from falling!

Chapter 353

Rebecca looked up, showing a hint of terror on her face.

Staring at the girl who was tightly gripping her hand, Rebecca's mind flashed back to the light that had glimmered in the hospital years ago, when she was nearly tortured to death by her husband and mother-in-law. She remembered the light from the girl who had made that phone call to her brother.

Her vision blurred as the two figures gradually merged.

But the next moment, she snapped back to reality, crying, “You’re not Miss Keira! Why do I see her shadow in you again? Keira, I’m sorry... There has to be at least one person in this world who remembers you...”

Keira felt she had reached her physical limit.

She heard Rebecca’s cries and, in desperation, scolded, “Stop spouting nonsense! Come back to us! I’m Keira, Rebecca. I want you to live. Otherwise, why did I bother saving you in the hospital before?!”

Rebecca was momentarily stunned.

But then she shook her head. “The mole by your eye is

Rebecca was momentarily stunned.

But then she shook her head. “The mole by your eye is drawn on... I don’t believe you. Let go, even if you pull me up, if I want to die, there are countless ways.”

She closed her eyes. “If you save me, I’ll only hate you. I don’t want to owe you or anyone else anything.”

Only by not owing anything to Keira could she justify continuing to hate her.

Otherwise, she would be betraying Keira!

Seeing her thoughts so extreme and obstinate, Keira sighed quietly.

From behind, Frankie shouted, “Miss South, don’t listen to her. If you can save Rebecca, you’ll be the Allen family’s savior. Please don’t let go!”

Hearing Frankie call her “Miss South” made Rebecca’s emotions escalate further. She struggled, trying to push Keira’s grip away.

She even extended her long nails, digging into Keira's flesh.

flesh.

But Keira felt no pain, even as her body still hung in midair during this life-or-death moment, with the people below looking as tiny as ants.

She knew the terrible consequences of falling from this height.

In such circumstances, the body would automatically block out the sensation of pain and release more dopamine, fueling the instinct to survive.

All Keira could do was shout at Frankie. "Shut up!"

Knowing that explaining anything to Rebecca at this moment would be pointless, she simply yelled, "Pull me up!"

Ellis and Frankie began to strain, slowly pulling Keira backward.

It didn't take long for Keira to be pulled up.

She still clung to Rebecca's hand without letting go until Frankie released her and grabbed Rebecca from the side. Only then did Keira relax.

She felt as though honor

She felt as though her arms were no longer her own.

Upon hearing this, Rebecca just moved her eyeballs, "Frankie, three years ago, when I didn't listen to your advice and insisted on marrying that man and moving to Oceanion with him, you should have considered me dead from that moment on..."

That sentence choked Frankie up.

He suddenly understood what Rebecca meant...

If there were no Keira, the previous Rebecca, the pampered Rebecca, the Rebecca who was the precious daughter of the Allen family, would have long since died in that hospital incident in Oceanion.

So, the Rebecca who was alive now was no longer his sister, nor the daughter of their parents, but someone saved by Keira.

In her heart, there was only Keira, her savior.

17:32

Chapter 353

Frankie, thinking of this, wanted to cry and to scold

her...

But he couldn't scold her; he knew that his sister was just unwell.

She was suffering from depression.

The girl who might save his sister might never appear again...

Frankie suddenly felt an overwhelming sense of helplessness.

Even though he had saved his sister once, he couldn't save her every time...

If there were any negligence on his part one day...

He clenched his fists tightly, not daring to think of the consequences.

Just then, Keira suddenly crawled to Rebecca's side, gazed deeply at her, and said in a low scolding voice, "Rebecca, what nonsense are you talking about? I only made a phone call for you. The people who gave birth

Rebecca looked at her.

Thinking about how she had desperately tried to save herself just moments ago...

If Frankie and Ellis hadn't arrived in time and grabbed her legs, she might have fallen down with her.

Rebecca started to cry. "Keera, stop pretending. I don't need you to save me! How could you save me?! How am I supposed to face Miss Keira?!"

She covered her face, starting to cry in agony.

She owed Keira her life now. How could her life now belong solely and cleanly to Miss Keira?

When Keira heard this, she moved her sore arm, watched Rebecca cry uncontrollably, and took a deep breath. "I told you, I'm Keira."

Rebecca's crying paused at that moment, then she continued to sob and bellow. "Do you think I would believe that? The mole under your eye is drawn on! Stop pretending to be Miss Keira!"

By her side, Frankie also said, "Miss South, thank you for this rescue, but please stop agitating her..."

Rebecca was momentarily stunned at this request.

Keira then said, "If the mole is still there after I remove the makeup, can that prove I am Keira?"

Rebecca was dumbfounded.

She then blurted out. "Keira, what new trick are you playing now? I've told you. Don't think that by saving me, I would put you on par with Miss Keira. You can never compare to her! You want to remove your makeup? Fine, here you go!"

But the words that followed were cut short as she looked up and saw Keira's face, coming to an abrupt halt!!

Rebecca looked at the person in front of her in disbelief.

Keira was holding a makeup remover wipe, wiping away the faux mole at the corner of her eye, but at the same time, she revealed the mole she had always hidden.

Rebecca had been with her almost every day when she was in Oceanion and was already familiar with the person in front of her.

The color and size of that mole indeed belonged to Keira!

Stunned, she stared at Keira, thinking for a moment that she might have seen it wrong..

After a while, she rubbed her eyes, and then tears welled up in her eyes. She looked at Keira with grievance...

Suddenly, she burst into a loud cry, her tears and snot streaming down without any regard for her image, just like a child who had been wronged!

Keira had intended to scold her, wanted to yell at her for not cherishing her own life, but as words came to her lips, she saw Rebecca crying like that, and she couldn't bring herself to say those words.

Rebecca was too extreme...

But all her extremes were for Keira.

Everyone in this world was qualified to scold her, except for Keira.

Keira sighed, stepped forward, and suddenly hugged Rebecca.

Rebecca was a few inches shorter than Keira, and she stiffened again, then she wrapped her arms tightly around her waist.

She buried her head into her chest, and while crying, she said between broken sobs, "Miss Keira, you're not

Keira had no choice but to nod again. "I'm not dead."

"Thank god..."

Rebecca started to cry muffled cries again.

She cried out all the grievances she had kept in her heart this month. She wanted to cry loudly, but she lacked the energy and could only sob...

Outside.

Frankie and Ellis were both stunned, unaware of what was happening inside the bathroom. They pressed their ears against the door, only hearing Rebecca's crying from inside.

The two exchanged glances, and then Frankie wanted to enter. He tried to open the door, only to find that the door was locked from the inside.

Frankie became even more anxious and shouted, "Rebecca, Rebecca? Keera? Miss South, open the door!"

But Rebecca only cried louder.

Frankie grew more anxious and looked around, then turned to Ellis. "The key! Isn't this hotel yours? Have the manager send the key over!"

Ellis immediately sent someone to fetch the keys and then also approached the bathroom door. "Keera,

Victoria showed a worried expression. "Ellis, Mr. Allen, surely Keera isn't harboring resentment toward Miss Allen and harming her in there, right?"

Upon hearing this, Frankie grew even more restless. He took a step back and called out to Ellis. "Move aside!"

Ellis made way.

Frankie was about to kick the door!

But just then, the bathroom door opened..

Frankie's kick missed, and he almost performed a split on the spot.

He propped himself up on the ground with both hands to stabilize himself, then looked inside the room.

He saw Keira standing there.

He immediately asked with concern, "Where's Rebecca?"

"She..."

Keira hadn't finished speaking when Victoria stepped forward and scolded, "Keera, what's wrong with you? Miss Allen is a distinguished guest, and you forcibly take her into the bathroom like this. What are you trying to do to her?"

Keira was perplexed.

She began, "I..."

Victoria continued. "I know Miss Allen offended you this morning, so you bear a grudge. But even so, you can't treat her like this. She's obviously overwhelmed with grief. Can't you just endure it a bit?"

Keira remained silent.

She simply crossed her arms, looking at Victoria. "Go on, keep talking.

Victoria didn't know what to say.

Seeing how stubborn Keira was, Victoria turned to Frankie. "Mr. Allen, I was just concerned about Miss Allen..."

Rebecca walked straight out of the bathroom, weakly saying, "Spare me your fake kindness!"

Upon seeing this, Victoria was a little startled, not understanding what had happened between Keira and Rebecca in the bathroom that managed to stabilize her mental state.

She hesitantly looked at Keira and then began. "Miss South, I didn't mean... You should know about Keera, right? Her mole was drawn on..."

Keira went straight ahead and slapped Victoria's face

But then realizing that Ellis and Frankie were both looking toward her, she quickly furrowed her brows and cried out with a wronged voice. "How could you misunderstand me like that? Am I that sort of person?"

Tears started to flow out of her eyes. "I just saw Miss Allen's makeup had been ruined by crying, and I wanted to help her touch it up..."

"Is that so?"

Keira asked indifferently.

Victoria promptly nodded.

But the next moment...

Keira raised her hand and slapped the other side of Victoria turned her head from the force of the slap, and she was furious. "Keera, how dare you?!"

Keira raised an eyebrow and said, “Whether it was intentional or not, today you almost killed both Miss Allen and me. I deserve to slap you twice. How about it, Mr. Ellis, do you disagree?”

Victoria immediately looked at Ellis. “Ellis, you must stand up for me! I am a daughter of the Olsen family. How can I just get slapped like this? If you allow her to do whatever she wants, when the word gets out, won’t the daughters of the Olsen family be treated as

Frankie also looked at Ellis with a puzzled expression. "Family conflict?"

But Ellis didn't answer their questions and simply glanced at his watch. "Alright, the wedding is still going on, don't waste time here!"

He glanced at Rebecca once more, made sure she was okay, then turned and went downstairs.

After he left, Victoria turned her gaze to Keira, sizing her up. Although still unclear about the meaning of the words "family conflict", when she saw the murderous look in Frankie and Rebecca's eyes, she got a fright and hurriedly followed Ellis down the stairs.

Once she had left, Frankie immediately turned to Rebecca, "Rebecca, you..."

Rebecca immediately said, "Frankie, I'm okay now."

He had been trying to say these words until he was blue in the face these past few days, but when had Rebecca actually listened?!

She just got saved and had an epiphany?

He hesitantly looked at Keira. "How did you make her realize it?"

Keira coughed, glanced at Rebecca, then said, "Scolded her a bit?"

Frankie was speechless.

He passed his gaze between Rebecca and Keira, finally resting his eyes on the corner of Keira's eye.

There, the mole was already gone.

She was still Keira, obviously...

He had no idea that just after the two had recognized each other, Keira immediately covered up the mole with foundation...

When the three of them went downstairs, the wed had already ended. As the bridesmaid, Keira's tas finished. Seeing Mary and Ellis getting into the car. then left the hotel.

She wanted to find a car to go home.

Then she immediately saw Lewis waiting outside.

He wore a cap, a mask, and a loose tracksuit. He smiled slightly the moment Keira stepped out, and he walked toward her.

Keira asked, "Why are you here?"

"To take you home."

He replied indifferently.

His deep, cello-like voice always gave a sense of security and made Keira feel warmth in her chest.

She nodded, then noticed Lewis's smile stiffen at the corner of his eyes.

Following his gaze, Keira looked over and saw Rebecca exiting the door, staring at her eagerly.

Then, Rebecca walked over coyly, her head lowered.

Well, Miss South, may I come to your place?"

"No."

Chapter 355

"Yes."

Lewis and Keira spoke up at the same time.

Afterward, Lewis looked at Keira, his brow furrowing as he gave her a signal with his eyes. "How could you let this person go to the South residence?"

Keira raised an eyebrow in response. "What's the problem?"

Lewis continued conveying his thoughts with his gaze. "This person has improper feelings toward me. How could you lead a wolf into your house?"

Keira was speechless.

She coughed, suddenly thinking that Lewis was somewhat self-absorbed.

In the end, Rebecca still squeezed into Lewis's car.

On the road, Rebecca kept staring at Keira without saying a word.

But she was frantically sending messages to Frankie on WhatsApp. "Frankie, Lewis is so scary! Will he forbid me from coming over to play with Keira in the future?"

Frankie said, “Talk to him nicely. Lewis is cold on the outside but warm on the inside. Be a bit softer with your attitude, and he’ll treat you better.”

Rebecca wrote, “Got it!”

Then she blinked, her gaze shifting from Keira to Lewis.

The group soon arrived at the South residence.

Lewis had just parked the car when he dragged Keira aside and lowered his voice. “She has just announced her intentions to marry me. How could you bring her back home?”

Keira patted his shoulder, “You’re overthinking it! She came here for me...”

Then she turned back to Rebecca, “I’ll go make dinner for you!”

Keira's identity is a secret; she wouldn't reveal it unless absolutely necessary.

Rebecca must be deceiving her...

Just as he thought about this, he observed that Rebecca, who was Keira's little tail, didn't follow Keira into the kitchen but instead kept looking at him hesitantly.

Her eyes were filled with words she seemed to hold back. She obviously had something to say to him.

Lewis's expression turned cold.

He knew this woman was harboring ill intentions.

She looked at Lewis.

But the moment Lewis looked her way, she hastily turned her attention to Amy. "Are you Keira's daughter? Wow, you're so cute! I want to play with you!"

Lewis was speechless.

He immediately turned and walked to a nearby sofa, sitting down with a frosty demeanor.

No sooner had he settled down than he saw Rebecca again, shuffling and dragging her feet as she came over and sat down beside him.

Lewis simply put down his phone and looked at her. "Miss Allen, do you have something to say to me?"

Rebecca swallowed. "Well..."

As she was struggling with how to begin, Lewis said indifferently, "No."

Rebecca was perplexed.

She was confused. "I haven't even said anything. How do you know it's a 'no'?"

Lewis chuckled. "I've known what's on your mind for a

She was perplexed, "No, I..."

Lewis stood up abruptly. "As I said, no means no!"

He turned and went upstairs.

Rebecca was speechless.

At this moment, she saw Ellis emerge from the bridal chamber.

“Uncle, you finally have some news!”

“I’m married today, and you didn’t attend my wedding!”

“You’re coming back tomorrow? Good, I have something important to discuss with you...”

Victoria hid nearby, and at these words, her eyes lit up slightly.

If Uncle Olsen were to return, wouldn’t she be able to complain to him?

Uncle Olsen teased wearily. “What now? Have you found out if she’s the illegitimate daughter of your dad or your second uncle?”

Ellis’s mouth twitched slightly. “Well, I’ll tell you in person when you come back!”

Lest he get too excited and rush back overnight...

Uncle Olsen just grunted a sound and cursed him, “Now you’ve learned to be mysterious?”

Listening to his voice, Ellis felt his mood seemed somewhat okay, so he asked, “How’s your business going? Any news of Lady South?”

Upon hearing this, Uncle Olsen fell silent.

His silence was the best answer.

At the thought of this possibility, Ellis’s mood grew heavier.

Just as he entered, he saw Mary had already removed her makeup and wedding dress, exchanging them for a conservatively styled nightgown.

Seeing him enter, Mary cast her eyes down. “You take the bed. I’ll sleep on the sofa.”

Her ice–cold demeanor irritated Ellis, and he scoffed. “Mary, I didn’t marry you to be a decoration!”

Mary stiffened.

Mary clenched her fists tightly.

The lawyer, slightly bewildered from being summoned in the middle of the night, took the two-page contract and read it quickly. "There's no trap. This contract is very favorable to you. Thinking of Mary's resolute manner and the way she assuredly spoke of the child being his every time, he suddenly began to doubt himself.

After the hangover, Ellis's head still throbbed slightly.

Groggily, he reached for the glass of water beside him, wanting to take a sip, only to find that it was unexpectedly alcohol.

The moment he placed the glass on the coffee table, he heard the lawyer's voice and paused slightly. He then slowly set the glass down.

His eyes cast downward, and he asked in a hoarse voice, "What's the result?"

As he spoke these words, he didn't notice the anticipation in his own voice.

The lawyer hesitated for a moment, seemingly afraid to answer, and only after a long pause did he respond softly.

“Of course, I went. It’s the Olsen and Davis families! But I really don’t get it, with all the people Ellis could marry, why choose that woman?”

“Are you talking about Mary? She’s so gorgeous and seductive. I’ve heard that pretty much everyone in the circle has had a turn with her. Is that true or what?”

The Gill family's status was comparable to the Olsen family.

But among the rich second generation, hierarchy mattered, and Ellis was the next in line to take over the Olsen family, while Austin was just a playboy, hence his status wasn't as high as Ellis's.

Normally, Austin would bow and scrape in front of Ellis, but being hit today, he felt humiliated in front of his friends!

He immediately roared, "Ellis, what are you doing?"

Ellis glared at him fiercely, "You're spreading lewd rumors about my wife behind my back, what do you think I should do?"

He rubbed his fists and loosened the muscles in his shoulders.

Austin's friends, hearing this, immediately tried to smooth things over with a grin. "Mr. Ellis, Austin was just mouthing off. Don't take it to heart. Of course, we know Miss Davis is pure and chaste. How could there possibly be any lewd rumors."

Possibly be any new rumors.

Austin, however, wasn't pleased with this response and shouted angrily, "How can there not be? I slept with her! Ellis, what are you showing off for? Aren't you just the chosen heir of your family? You're not in charge yet; you're just like any other junior in the family!"

Austin's friends didn't dare to offend Ellis and quickly said, "Austin, stop talking nonsense. Hurry up and apologize to Mr. Ellis!"

Austin wiped the blood from the corner of his mouth, stood up, and sneered at Ellis. "What should I apologize for? What, are we not even allowed to speak now? I'll lay it out here today; I've slept with Mary! So what? She's just a daughter from a sideline of the Davis family; I slept with her, and she's still out of my league?"

Ellis's face turned even more grave, his fists clenched- tighter.

Seeing this, Austin scoffed, "You should have done your research before getting married. Besides, that was before the wedding. Haven't you slept with her too? Where did your kid come from, if not?"

Ellis's expression froze.

You can tolerate being cuckolded like this? But if you haven't slept with her and she's pregnant, doesn't that prove what I said?"

Austin sneered, "How can you be so sure? The child must be over a month old by now, right? Check the timing. I slept with her over a month ago too, so the kid might actually be a Gill! Mr. Ellis, you better get a DNA test, lest the Olsen family bloodline gets muddied with an unclear bastard!"

He stopped his movements and saw that Austin's face was swollen, his nose and mouth bleeding.

Ellis glared at him. "Speak! You never touched Mary! How could someone like you ever catch her eye!"

He really hadn't caught her eye...

Half a year ago, Mary's uncle wanted to cooperate with their family, and he took the opportunity to ask for Mary was beautiful.

Even if her reputation wasn't good in the circle, many still desired to sleep with her.

Mary's uncle immediately arranged it upon hearing the request, but unfortunately, after seeing Mary in the hotel, he was beaten up by her.

Then she cursed him and ran away.

He hadn't succeeded with her, but he'd already bragged about it, so when his good friends asked if he had slept with Mary and how it felt, Austin could only insist that it was great!

This also meant he had no room to retract his claims in

For a second-generation rich son with little to his name, accustomed to flattery from others, how could he possibly admit he hadn't in front of his friends?

He rushed into the bathroom, washed his face with cold water, took a deep breath, and leaned against the wall.

At this moment, he suddenly felt a strong urge to express his frustrations.

He took out his phone and searched through his contacts until he saw the message from the call to Lewis the previous night.

After a moment's thought, he dialed the number.

The call quickly went through, and Lewis's voice was cold. "What do you want?"

Ellis sneered. "Are you angry?"

Ellis sneered. "Are you angry?"

There was silence on the other end.

Ellis then suddenly thought of something. "Don't tell me, you didn't go home last night? What? Didn't Keera call you?"

Lewis's voice turned colder. "I went home. Why would

I need a call?"

Ellis took a deep breath, "Exactly, you went home, so why are you so angry?"

It was obvious!

Even though Lewis had returned home and saw Keira, she, along with Amy and Rebecca, had already fallen asleep in the secondary bedroom.

She might not even have realized he was gone for two hours!

That was too much!

Lewis decided that he had to teach Keira a lesson!

As for what kind of a lesson?

Lewis decided that he had to teach Keira a lesson!

As for what kind of a lesson?

Well, he wouldn't pay her any attention before breakfast!

Lewis felt wronged, but he only said, "You can't even handle your own life, so stop worrying about me!"

Leaving those words behind, Lewis hung up.

Then, he headed to the dining room.

Usually, it was Keira who got up to prepare breakfast for him and Amy.

Today, they hadn't woken up yet, which was definitely because they stayed up late the previous night, so he decided to make breakfast for them.

Lewis busied himself in the kitchen.

By the time breakfast was ready, he heard the sound of a door opening and footsteps descending the stairs from the master bedroom upstairs.

Lewis's face was still dark with anger, but when Keira appeared before him, she was stunned by the sight of three portions of breakfast on the table. "Why did you

Keira sat down and asked curiously, "Have you eaten yet?"

Rebecca, who had come downstairs with Amy, approached and placed Amy in front of the breakfast that was clearly intended for a child.

Just as Rebecca sat down, Lewis coldly pulled the breakfast away from her. "Sorry, this one's mine."

Rebecca was dumbfounded.

She stared at Lewis in bewilderment and, sensing the chill emanating from him, looked at Keira with a wronged expression.

Upon seeing this, Keira couldn't help but feel torn between laughter and tears.

She raised an eyebrow but didn't move, only glancing toward the kitchen. "If you want to eat, make it yourself! The bread slices are ready."

Since Rebecca once announced boldly that she liked Lewis, she had to face the consequences herself.

Keira wanted to sigh.

Suddenly, a phrase came to her mind. "A man is ever a boy until the end."

Lewis was really being childish today!

She shook her head helplessly but passed the fried egg from her bowl to him. "You can have mine."

Lewis nodded joyfully.

Keira also silently breathed a sigh of relief.

She liked soft-boiled eggs, and the fried eggs today were obviously overcooked, which wasn't tasty... No, she was definitely just concerned about Lewis.

Olsen family.

After Ellis got hung up on, he had nowhere to go.

The office knew he was getting married and considerately gave him a week off, leaving him nowhere to turn.

In the end, he could only go home reluctantly.

When his car stopped in front of the Olsen residence, Ellis was listless, but then his eyes lit up upon seeing a familiar car.

Wasn't that Uncle Olsen's car?

He immediately strode through the door and saw Uncle Olsen who, despite having weathered hardships, looked exhausted but had no other expression on his face and no signs of injury.

He immediately let out a breath of relief.

Uncle Olsen also heard his return and put down his phone to look in his direction. Though puzzled as to why his nephew was returning from outside on his wedding night, he still asked the question he cared about most. "Who exactly is Keera's father? Your father's, or your second uncle's?"

Ellis's expression changed, and he looked the man up and down.

It seemed he wanted to persuade Ellis to acknowledge this sister.

Ellis just twitched the corner of his mouth, then turned to him. "Uncle, is there a possibility that she could be your daughter?"

Uncle Olsen had already furrowed his brows. "Speak:

“Moreover, I was with Ellis last night. It’s a pity I’m allergic to alcohol. Otherwise, I really wanted to try getting drunk.”

Just as Keira was undecided about how to choose among the three people, the doorbell saved her.

Keira jumped to the task. “There’s someone at the door. I’ll go have a look.”

She slipped out and opened the door, only to see Mary standing outside.

The bride from the day before was quietly looking at her, a bitter smile on her face. "I'm a little tired. I want to lean on you."

Keira, who was still expected to attend to three other people, was speechless.

She immediately stepped aside to let Mary in.

Thus, four people needed her now.

Mary didn't answer.

Keira suddenly thought of what Lewis had just said, about him drinking with Ellis last night, and instantly understood, "He wasn't at home on your wedding night? He still doesn't believe that the child is his?!"

Mary forced a bitter laugh.

Keira immediately stood up. "Mary, there's no need to wait for the child to be born. Divorce him now! We can't tolerate this indignity!"

Mary, however, shook her head.

She didn't say it was for Keira's sake but instead "My parents raised me. I'll stay with Ellis for ten months to give them a moment of pride. That's how repay their kindness. Besides, without a father, it wouldn't look good on the birth certificate..."

"He won't lay a hand on me anyway. Mr. and Mrs. Olsen are good to me. We get along peacefully for the Keira still felt it unreliable and wanted to say more, but Mary spoke again. "I know what you're worried about, but I have thought it through."

"...All right, I respect your decision."

As a friend, no matter what decision the other party made, one should choose to respect it.

Keira always adhered to this principle, only deep down she knew, she only had ten months left.

If during these ten months, she couldn't complete task from that mysterious person, then she would no chance to save her mother.

But how could she collaborate with the Gill and Freeman families?

She was pondering these problems when she saw Mary sigh so she immediately went over and hugged

"I'm fine."

Mary suddenly said, "As children, we joked with each other, hoping the other would marry our respective brothers so we could live together. Who would have thought that just after you got divorced, I would get married..."

Keira immediately said, "Why does that matter? Since Ellis doesn't believe you, then move into my place!"

Mary nodded. "Okay."

She really had nowhere to go.

If she dared to return to the Davis residence, her parents, Uncle Wayne, and even Uncle Ken from the first branch, would persuade her to go back.

Staying with the Olsen family...

Mary suddenly lowered her eyes, thinking of the she had dealt with Victoria that morning, and just very tired.

She couldn't help but complain, "You have no idea how fussy Victoria is. Just because she doesn't like eating onions, there were no onions in the breakfast dishes..."

"The Olsen family never had a daughter, and that's why they spoil her so much!"

Mary said indignantly, "It's so strange. The three branches have seven sons and not a single daughter! They spoil the adopted daughter so much. If there was a biological one in the third branch, wouldn't she be spoiled to the heavens?"

Upon hearing this, Keira raised her eyebrows.

As she was conflicted about whether to reveal that she was the daughter of Uncle Olsen, the doorbell rang again.

Who could it be this time?

As she considered this, the nanny went to open the door and quickly came back.
“Ma’am, someone from the Olsen family is here!”

Chapter 363

363 Chapter 362

Had someone from the Olsen family come?

These words made Keira look toward Mary, thinking that it might be Ellis coming to pick her up and take her home.

Even Mary was stunned for a moment, then turned to look outside the door.

A flicker of anticipation involuntarily appeared in Mary’s eyes-if it really was him...

But then she let out a bitter laugh. How could it be him?

With that thought, she saw several figures enter the room, with two women at the forefront, their faces livid. Was that Christina and Victoria?!

The moment they entered, Amy immediately clung to Keira's leg in terror, tears welling up in her eyes. She was clearly still traumatized by the previous incident a school.

Seeing their malicious intent, Keira quickly picked up Amy and placed her in Lewis's arms. "Take her

Lewis glanced at the two women, then looked at her with a questioning gaze. "Are you sure you can handle this?"

"No problem."

Keira scoffed. "Before, I was under Isla's thumb because of Grandma. She's not here, and I'm not as fragile as you think."

She rotated her wrist and clenched her fist.

Seeing her readiness, Lewis raised an eyebrow and then swiftly carried Amy upstairs.

Mary, standing aside, couldn't understand what they were saying, but Rebecca did, and her admiration for Keira grew stronger.

Keira was brilliant in every aspect!

But she still stepped forward, blocking the side of Keira, and faced the two from the Olsen family. "What are you doing here?"

Christina immediately sneered. "Rebecca, I would advise you not to meddle in other people's business, lest when the fight starts, you accidentally get hurt

Rebecca shot back. “You wouldn’t dare!”

“Why wouldn’t we dare?” Christina sneered again. “Do you really think you’re some Allen family’s little princess? Among the five major families of Clance, the Allen family is second from the bottom. How do you even match us in terms of family background?”

Rebecca was instantly taken aback.

Christina then curled her lip dismissively. “Everyone has been flattering you, and you’ve started to believe you’re so important. Doesn’t everyone know you were tricked into marriage and nearly died in Oceanion, unable to return? You’re a wilting flower and a lovesick fool. Have you been bewitched by Keera again?”

different! Moreover, the Olsen family and the Horton family had a marriage arrangement long ago. It didn’t work out between Mr. Horton and Victoria before, but now hasn’t the fate arrived?”

Keira looked at the nanny with confusion.

The nanny immediately explained, "They came with bodyguards, and as soon as I opened the door, they came in before I had the chance to close it."

Keira was speechless.

Alright, today her home really seemed like a place anyone could enter.

She looked toward the doorway and saw Mrs. Jones, who had helped her at the school gate last time, leading the three-year-old George.

George had red rims around his eyes, clearly having just cried, and was still sniffing as he entered.

Mrs. Jones herself had a face full of worry and anxiety. Even before she stepped in, her voice came through. "Miss South, I inquired about your address at the school and took the liberty of coming over.

Her voice trailed off, however, when she saw

Mrs. Jones looked at Victoria and Christina in bewilderment and then turned her gaze back to Keira.

Seeing this, Keira immediately stepped forward and asked, "What happened?"

Mrs. Jones frowned, glanced at Christina and Victoria again, and then said, "The kindergarten has expelled George and Amy!"

At these words, Keira was momentarily stunned. "What did you say?"

Recently, she had taken a long leave for Amy.

It allowed her to retain the spot in this elite kindergarten while letting Amy rest well at home, ensuring she felt plenty of love and security.

The little girl had suffered too much before and was now always timid and fearful. Growing up like this would leave scars in her mind.

But how had she been expelled?

This school was one of the top institutions in CI and to get back in would be extremely difficult...

Mrs. Jones also glared at Christina and Victoria with tearful eyes. "It's because the school board has just undergone changes."

Keira immediately sensed that Christina and Victoria had a hand in it and asked, "What changes?"

Mrs. Jones sighed. "The Olsen family has become the new school board member."

Previously, the Olsen family only had shares in the kindergarten, but now they had become school board members, which made an immediate shift in their status within the school.

Victoria and Christina exchanged a glance, and Christina, with her arms crossed, stepped forward. "Indeed, the position of this board chairman will be handled by me. Keira, your daughter and George are both unmanageable during class. We have held a meeting and discussed this matter, and they'll be expelled from the school!!"

364 Chapter 363

Keira heard these words and immediately furrowed her brows. "Why should you?!"

Christina sneered, "Don't you know? The position of school board member for kindergartens is generally held by women. Since the Olsen family became a school trustee, they must send a representative. Now I am the only qualified woman in the Olsen family, so of course, it's me!"

Keira found this laughable.

Mrs. Jones, who was standing nearby, said, “Even so, you can’t just expel children at will! Doing this, you’ve caused great psychological harm to the child!”

Mrs. Jones thought back to when she had suddenly received a call from the school and was flustered, immediately rushing there.

She found her son, who was usually well-behaved and always smiling, crying with swollen eyes.

Her son was standing at the classroom door, being punished, with his little stool and backpack, and when she approached, he immediately burst into tears.

The teacher nearby not only offered no comfort but instead scolded, “This is a school, what are you crying for? Don’t disrupt the other children’s classes!”

Mrs. Jones almost lost her mind and charged forward, fiercely pushing the teacher away and then taking her son into her arms.

She gently patted her son’s back, soothing him, and then stared at the teacher in anger. “What are you doing?”

Seeing Amy being bullied, she had felt as if it were happening to her own child.

Now that it was her own son suffering, she felt almost driven to madness.

Yet the teacher was still there, clamoring. “What am doing? Your son misbehaved at school, urinating at will, and throwing worms into someone else’s backpack. After a meeting and discussion, he has been expelled!”

Having said that, the teacher pointed to a blackboard nearby, which displayed a public criticism notice!

Mrs. Jones glanced at it and saw that not only her son but also Amy was on the list.

George immediately said, "Mom, I didn't do it. The poop was something the teacher dropped on the ground; she was framing me! I didn't throw worms into my classmate's backpack either. It was my classmate who brought them to play with, and all the classmates admitted it. But the teacher insists it was me.

George never lied.

Therefore, Mrs. Jones immediately believed him and turned to the teacher. "I demand that you apologize to my son today!"

Yet, the teacher retorted. "I have nothing to apologize for. This was the board's decision, and it has nothing to

Mrs. Jones immediately understood; it was because of

364 Chapter 363

Even though she had just completed a project with the Horton Group, it was merely a small opening for Horton Group's entry into Clance, and it was no match compared to the power of the top five elite families...

Mrs. Jones suddenly thought of the last time when Keera casually suggested that her husband would sign a contract with the Horton Group, and then it actually happened.

That was why she didn't even think about it and immediately rushed over here...

But now, Mrs. Jones gradually calmed down.

She felt she had been grasping at straws out of desperation.

Keera was just a young girl, and after the Horton Group incident, her husband had made some inquiries about her.

Reportedly, she had been brainwashed by a boyfriend in college and lived the life of a devoted wife and mother after marriage. She had only recently divorced, completed a project, and gotten involved with the Olsen family and the Davis family.

It must have not been on many favors to not a would come to her now?

It would only bring Keera down with her own sorrow.

Mrs. Jones was pondering this when she heard Christina speak. "It's not without reason, is it? We've provided a reason, and we even caught it all on surveillance!"

Mrs. Jones snapped. "Yes, it's on tape, but it's been maliciously edited! My son simply walked past some feces, and you claim he did it. He just glanced at a classmate's insects, and you insist he brought them into school... This is simply unreasonable!" Google search FindNovel.net

Christina sneered. "Unreasonable? Didn't I reason with you last time at school? Did you listen? Later we found out it's because your family signed a contract with the Horton family. Do you think your family is am now? My sister is going to marry into the Hor family, and yet you are oblivious to your own stupidity!"

These words made Mrs. Jones's face change.

Keira chuckled. "Why are you insulting yourself he

Christina was so angry that her chest heaved. "You little slut!"

Then she looked at the surrounding bodyguards. "You guys, go hold her down for me. I'm going to teach her a lesson today and show her what I'm capable of!"

Keira raised an eyebrow, showing no intention of fighting back, and instead pointed to the nearby camera. "This is my home, not a school where you can manipulate the surveillance. Believe it or not, if you dare to lay a hand on me, I'll have you arrested!"

After saying that, she looked at Christina. "Guess whether your masters will protect you then?"

Mrs. Horton?

Keira found it laughable and retorted. "Where did this Mrs. Horton come from? Did Mr. Horton agree? You're calling yourself Mrs. Horton. Where do you get this sense of superiority from?"

Victoria was choked by the retort. "You..."

Then she turned to look at Christina.

Christina then said, "Mrs. Jones, Keera, I came here today to tell you that if Keera can apologize to me sincerely, I might be able to forgive you..."

Mrs. Jones's eyes lit up immediately when she heard this but then dimmed again shortly...

Before Mrs. Olsen could speak, Keira asked, "How should I apologize?"

"Of course, by kneeling and begging me!"

Christina glared at her viciously. "The daughters of the Olsen family have both been hit by you: you must give Keira laughed at the remark. "The only two adopted daughters? Do you have any idea who I am?!"

365 Chapter 364

“Who are you?”

Christina sneered, “You’re Keera, aren’t you? Before coming here, we had already thoroughly investigated your background.”

Keira was about to speak when Mary suddenly charged in front of her, blocking her way. “Christina, Victoria, that’s enough! Believe it or not, if I tell Ellis about today’s events, and he won’t let you off!”

Christina was startled, hesitating for a moment. She hesitated.

Christina lowered her gaze and said indifferently, "Yesterday, Ellis seemed to have gone out. Why weren't you together on your wedding night?"

That remark seemed to remind Christina.

She immediately acted like she had caught on something. "Chris, are you serious?"

She seldom called Christina by her full name but Christina hated it. It was as if she was taken into the Olsen family just by a random chance.

10:27

365 Chapter 364

Christina nodded. "I saw it with my own eyes. After Ellis left last night, he never came back. Mary, what's going on with you and Ellis? It couldn't be that you're having a spat, right? You've just gotten married; it should be your honeymoon period..."

Christina said, "It's definitely because Ellis doesn't love her, what else could it be? I always thought there was something wrong with their marriage. There are so many young ladies in Clance, why would Ellis end up with her of all people? She must have done something shameful to seduce him! Now she's having a child, hoping to rise above her station overnight. Mary, I advise you to recognize your place. Do you really think that by marrying Ellis, you can become our sister-in-law? Let me tell you, it's impossible! No one will accept you!"

Christina said, "Victoria, you can't just say that does have a status after all. We should still let Christina scoffed. "Fine, she can apologize. As long as the apology is sincere enough, we can let her off hook!"

Christina raised an eyebrow.

Christina immediately laughed. "Mary, you can't be that naive. Is an apology over and done with just by saying it?"

Mary immediately furrowed her brows. "Then what do you want? Or should I say, how much money do you want?"

Christina and Victoria exchanged glances before Christina spoke up. "We don't need money."

Mary blurted out without thinking. "Then what do you want? A house? Jewelry? Or something else?"

Christina didn't say a word, only looked at Keira with a smile.

Christina then crossed her arms. "We won't make things difficult for our sister-in-law. Given your spec and current pregnancy, let's have Keera kneel and apologize, and that'll be fine."

"Kneel?"

"What about us?"

Christina took a step forward, her chin slightly raised as she looked down at the others. "Are you going to kneel? Beg for mercy! Don't force us to get physical!"

Keira, with her arms crossed, stood her ground and spoke only to Mary and Rebecca. "You two, go upstairs."

Mary didn't understand what was happening, but Rebecca immediately nodded, grabbing Mary and pulling her back.

Mary was very worried. Just as she was about to move forward again, she saw Keira twist her fists slightly, take a step forward, and look at Christina, saying, “Quit the nonsense. Are you planning to come at me o together, or one by one?”

Christina then looked toward Mrs. Jones. “Mrs. Jones, aren’t you afraid? If she really dares to fight back, we definitely won’t let your son or her daughter go back

Upon hearing this, Mrs. Jones said, "Whether he goes to school or not isn't important. What matters is that I want George to know he's not a measurement of value! Miss South, do as you see fit! If worst comes to worst, I'll send my son abroad!"

Keira looked at Mrs. Jones again after hearing this and felt that she had found a friend worth keeping.
