

Chapter 1646 We Can't Let Your Parents See Anya

Garrett immediately walked back and leaned against Laney. He held her arm and apologized sincerely. "My parents miss the child so much and begged me to let them see her. That's why I want to take the child out secretly."

In all truth, Garrett didn't think it was that big of a deal to let his parents see Anya.

He thought there would be no problem as long as he could take Anya back before Laney finished her run. However, things didn't work out in his favor, and Laney found out.

"Laney, my parents hadn't seen Anya for a long time. It's not like they came with bad intentions. They just wanted to see their granddaughter. Can't you try to look at things from their perspective and consider their feelings?" Garrett spoke in a gentle voice. He wanted to talk things over with Laney calmly.

from their perspective and consider their feelings?" Garrett spoke in a gentle voice. He wanted to talk things over with Laney calmly.

Laney turned to him sharply and sneered. "And why should I do that? Has anyone ever tried to do the same for me? When have my feelings been considered?"

Garrett fumbled for words, but couldn't find anything to say.

Laney resumed her questioning. "Were you planning on taking the child away secretly? I saw your mother holding Anya in her arms, and several people were standing in front of the limo."

When Laney first saw them, her first thought was that the Harding family came to take the child away. Before she knew it, she was running to them and grabbing Anya. When her child was in her arms, she was able to calm down enough to notice that Garrett hadn't brought any of Anya's things, which made her relieved. The next moment, Garrett held up three fingers and swore with utmost devotion, "Laney, I swear, I have not once thought of taking our daughter to the Harding family in secret. They may be my parents, but I'm not blind. I know that things turned out like this because of their mistakes. At most, I just wanted to let them spend some time with Anya, but letting them take her away is something I'd never allow."

Garrett knew that Laney had no desire to see his parents, so he didn't let them inside the house that afternoon.

The sincerity on Garrett's face was something that could not be faked. He was bending over backward trying to build their life according to her wishes. Closing her eyes, Laney breathed out and let her anger cool off. "Alright. I'll forgive you this time, but I hope this won't happen again."

Garrett hung his head, his figure slumping in tiredness and discouragement. In a rare moment, he looked utterly defeated.

As if she didn't notice that, Laney continued, "I still don't want your parents to see Anya in the future. You saw them just now. They scared Anya and she kept crying. And I'm against raising her with the Harding family. I want Anya to grow up happy, and making her live in that house would cause her nothing but pain.

No child should grow up in that kind of environment."

Garrett had not spoken a word. Laney tugged on his sleeve and asked, "Did you hear what I just said?"

Garrett lowered his head helplessly. He kept silent for a long time, with complex and painful emotions in his eyes, before saying, "I won't take the child out secretly in the future."

Janet and Johanna were on the way back to the White family's house for dinner. After work, Brandon would come to have dinner with them.

However, Janet called Brandon several times in the car, but his phone was still powered off.

"That's weird. Brandon's never hung up on me for no reason before." Janet's gut told her something was amiss.

Johanna tried to quell her worries. "Maybe he's just busy with work. Larson Group just had a press conference. I'm sure they have their hands full with the aftermath."

Janet was still worried, but she didn't want to make Johanna worry, so she said, "I'll go to Brandon's company to have a look. Mom, you can go back first. Brandon and I will come back for dinner later."
