

Chapter 2043 Backstage At Fashion Week

The fashion week was going to begin in a few days.

Janet found herself in a whirlwind of activity, shuttling between home, Rowena Studio, and W Marks.

Two days before the grand event, the team finally completed their ready-to-wear collection, bringing their creations to the fashion show venue to ensure everything was set.

Draco arrived with his assistant, ready to arrange the accessories.

Spotting Janet still hard at work, he approached with concern etched on his face. "Why are you still here, Janet? The work is done. You should go home and rest."

His eyes drifted to her slightly rounded belly, and he pressed on, "Let others handle this from now on. I know I sound like a nag, but you're pregnant now. Things are different. You need to take it easy."

Janet felt a flush of embarrassment. Ever since her pregnancy, she'd been showered with special treatment and constant reminders to rest.

"I know, Draco. But I'm feeling great, and a bit of activity is good for the baby."

She then pulled Sonia forward with a bright smile. "Let me introduce you to Sonia."

"Hello, I'm Draco Wesley." Draco introduced himself, extending a hand with a courteous smile.

Sonia, cool and reserved, simply nodded in acknowledgment.

Her posture became guarded, eyes watchful as she sized Draco up.

Janet found Sonia's reaction somewhat amusing and puzzling all at once.

Seeing someone sincerely protecting Janet, Draco felt slightly reassured of her wellbeing.

"Janet, make sure to communicate well with the models and coordinate with the production team before the show. We need to be ready to make our entrance within the first three minutes of the opening."

"Got it."

Just then, Lexi walked in, carrying the dress.

Draco quickly instructed his assistant, "Go help carry the dress inside and arrange it."

Janet turned to Sonia. "You go help as well."

Sonia blinked in surprise, not expecting the opportunity to come so soon.

With Janet, everything seemed effortlessly attainable.

"Who will protect you if I leave?"

Janet chuckled. "There's no danger here. Go lend a hand. I'll wait for you here. Be quick."

"Okay." Reluctantly, Sonia left Janet and followed Lexi backstage.

Lexi was a bit resentful. She had taken an instant dislike to Sonia from the moment of their first encounter, though she couldn't deny that she was at fault.

Still holding on to the memory of their last encounter, Lexi said begrudgingly, "Follow me."

In the backstage area, the assistant pointed Lexi to where Rowena Studio's garments were stored and turned to leave.

However, curiosity got the better of Lexi. "Hey, where is your coat?"

Without giving it a thought, the assistant pointed to the sheer coat in the middle.

This fashion week involved a collaboration between the two studios, but splitting the designs evenly might create a disjointed aesthetic.

Hence, after discussing the design, styles, and color coordination, Rowena Studio took charge of the dress, while W Marks handled the coat.

Although Lexi had seen the design before, seeing the coat in person was breathtaking.

"It's incredible," she murmured.

The assistant simply smiled and remained silent.

Sonia cast a silent glance at Lexi before shifting her gaze to W Marks' garment storage, a faint glint in her eyes.
