Sonia hurried over.

Observing Brandon assisting Janet as they walked, she quietly trailed behind.

Brandon had already noticed Sonia's presence and harbored suspicions about her.

Abruptly stopping, Brandon fixed Sonia with a probing gaze. "Didn't I instruct you to stay with Janet and ensure her safety? Why weren't you with her?"

"I..." Sonia hesitated, lips pursed, unsure how to respond.

"Don't blame Sonia," Janet intervened, tugging at Brandon's sleeve to ease the tension. "Thanks to Sonia today, I had enough time to make last-minute adjustments to the dress."

Brandon's somber expression softened slightly, surprise flickering in his eyes. "What do you mean?"

"At the last minute, there was an issue with the dress, so I rushed over. Sonia was concerned about me running and potentially harming the baby, so she carried me to the back stage," Janet explained.

Brandon frowned deeply.

It wasn't that he doubted Janet's explanation, but he found it hard to believe Sonia could be so considerate.

Lost in thought, Brandon unconsciously made his way towards the backstage area.

"It wasn't me, I'm telling you!"

"The evidence is right here; what more can you say?"

Inside, voices were raised in a heated argument.

Brandon's attention was drawn to the commotion. "Who are arguing?"

Draco glanced inside and saw an upset Lexi and an angry assistant embroiled in the dispute.

Recognizing the ongoing conflict, Draco sighed with resignation. "I won't involve myself in Rowena Studio's affairs, but I urge you to resolve this issue." He turned to Janet. "I won't pursue this matter with Lexi. Consider it a favor to Rowena Studio."

Normally, such a serious incident would warrant a thorough investigation, but Lexi was Janet's employee. Draco didn't want to burden Janet, especially given her pregnancy and exhaustion.

Janet didn't give it much thought and expressed her gratitude. "Thank you, Draco. I'll handle it."

"Okay." Draco nodded, then signaled to his assistant, and the two exited back stage together.

"What's going on?" Brandon asked, clearly puzzled by the situation.

Janet began to explain, but Sonia, standing beside her, spoke up first.

"The main dress that W Marks and Rowena Studio were set to launch together was damaged. According to the surveillance footage and Draco's assistant, Lexi is the suspect."

Sonia pointed at Lexi, her expression serious.

Brandon looked at Lexi impassively. "Do you have anything to say for yourself?"

Tears welling in her eyes, Lexi pleaded desperately, "No, it wasn't me! I wasn't there that night! Mr. Larson, please trust me!"

Before Brandon or Janet could respond, Sonia interjected sharply. "If you claim you weren't there, then who can vouch for you?"

Lexi hesitated, shaking her head. "I don't have anyone who can prove I was home alone."

Sonia maintained a professional demeanor. "W Marks has presented surveillance footage and evidence, whereas you have not. Therefore, you remain a suspect."

"I'm not!" Lexi sobbed, feeling unfairly accused.

Janet observed Lexi's genuine anguish and began to have doubts.

But seeing Brandon and Sonia pressing on, Janet fell silent for a moment. Then, in a compassionate tone, she addressed Lexi. "Lexi, you've worked hard for the fashion show. Why don't you take a few days of paid leave to rest at home?"
