

Chapter 2062 DNA Identification

After a moment's hesitation, Brandon confessed to Janet that he was investigating Sonia.

Given Sonia's close relationship with Janet, he needed to ensure her background was spotless.

Janet frowned slightly upon hearing this.

To her, Sonia was an exceptional bodyguard, beyond suspicion. Yet she understood Brandon's actions stemmed from concern for her safety.

After contemplating it, Janet gently patted Brandon's hand and reassured him, "Since you're worried, I'll have my employees come here if they need anything. I'll stay home until the baby is born."

"Okay," Brandon said with a smile as he embraced Janet, feeling his anxiety fade away.

Brandon's phone suddenly beeped as they hugged.

"You have a message. You should take a look at it," Janet said, letting go of him.

Brandon glanced at his phone and frowned deeply.

"Really?" he murmured.

Janet, who was still standing by his side, asked, "What's the matter?"

Brandon turned his phone towards her and showed her the message on his phone.

It was a picture from one of Brandon's subordinates. Janet took a look at the picture and saw the words "DNA Identification Test Results." She was quite taken aback when she saw this.

Brandon chose that moment to speak.

"You mentioned feeling an inexplicable connection to Sonia, so I did a DNA test. But it turns out you and Sonia share no blood relation."

"Okay," Janet said, her expression giving nothing of how she thought away.

Brandon stared intently at her, trying to gauge her emotions. He looked closely for any signs of anger on her face but found none. "Aren't you angry?"

"We don't have to be family to feel close to each other. There's no reason to get worked up over that," Janet said.

"Okay," Brandon simply said.

"I'll watch Sonia more closely if that will make you feel better," Janet replied.

Suddenly, Janet clutched her belly in pain and cried out.

"What's wrong?" Brandon asked anxiously.

Janet smiled weakly and said, "The baby just kicked. Do you want to listen?"

"Yes," Brandon said, nodding eagerly, then knelt to place his ear on her belly.

Meanwhile, Alexandra called Sonia.

Alexandra seemed to be in a bad mood. "What's wrong with you? How could you let Brandon suspect you to the point of taking your hair for a DNA test?"

"Brandon tested my hair? I had no idea," Sonia said in shock. "What do we do now? Was I exposed?"

She never thought Brandon would be so vigilant.

"No, you were not exposed. I covered for you," Alexandra replied crossly.

Sonia breathed a sigh of relief. "I'll be more careful next time."

"Okay. I'll get someone to assist you in dealing with Janet's child. You must find a way to create a rift between Janet and Brandon," Alexandra said.
