

Chapter 2079 Brandon Questioned Sonia

Although Brandon had suspicions about Sonia's identity earlier, he was still taken aback by the DNA test results.

He meticulously read the report several times and eventually decided it was time to discuss it with Sonia.

Before doing so, Brandon made sure to organize other matters, and it was two days later when he finally returned home.

Janet had been missing Brandon deeply during his absence, so much so that when she heard of his return, she hurried downstairs, disregarding the work she was handling.

Brandon caught sight of Janet rushing down the stairs and felt a mix of warmth and concern. "Be careful."

Just as he spoke, Janet ran into Brandon's arms.

"Brandon, where have you been? I've missed you so much," Janet said, her voice thick with emotion.

Janet's dependency on Brandon had grown significantly since her pregnancy.

"I had to handle some things and check on Mona," Brandon explained to Janet in a soft tone. "Has everything been okay here these past two days? Is the baby still moving around in your belly?"

"No. the baby's been really behaved lately," Janet whispered in response to Brandon.

They then shared a tender kiss.

After their intimate moment, Brandon asked Janet, "Has Lexi stopped by our house lately?"

"No," Janet replied, shaking her head. "Why do you ask?"

Brandon helped Janet to sit on the living room sofa. "Just concerned that you might be overworking yourself and not resting enough."

Hearing this, Janet offered a helpless smile. "I'll take care of myself. Don't worry too much."

Brandon nodded in understanding.

Though he knew Janet was capable of looking after herself, his concern for her wellbeing was something he couldn't easily set aside.

As their conversation came to an end, Janet brought up his recent trip to visit Mona.

"Didn't you say you went to visit Aunt Mona? How did it go?"

Brandon pondered for a moment and then shared with Janet what he had learned about Mona, but he deliberately left out the part about Sonia being Mona's daughter.

He had promised Sonia he would keep her secret, and he intended to honor that promise for the time being.

Janet seemed slightly disappointed by the conversation.

"Why that look?" Brandon noticed Janet's expression, instinctively pulling her into his arms to offer comfort.

"It's okay. I just feel a bit sad for Aunt Mona." Janet snuggled into Brandon's arms. "How's she feeling?"

Janet's question made Brandon remember Mona's intense emotions during that period.

He chose not to share those details with Janet, not wanting to worry her further. "She's doing alright."

Finally, Brandon suggested to Janet, "You should call your mother."

"About what?" Janet looked puzzled.

In a soothing voice, Brandon explained, "Now that Mona knows you've been found, she won't avoid seeing your mother anymore. Maybe your mother should visit her more often."

Janet agreed and promptly stood up to make the call.

As Janet and Johanna talked on the phone, Brandon left the house and headed straight to Sonia's house.

At that moment, Sonia was home, lost in thought as she stared at her phone.

Ever since she had given Brandon a strand of her hair, Alexandra had gone silent, which worried Sonia that Alexandra might have discovered something.

Suddenly, the doorbell rang.

Sonia came back to her senses and carefully watched the person entering through the door's peephole.

Seeing it was Brandon, Sonia let out a relieved sigh and opened the door.

Before Sonia could ask about his unexpected visit, Brandon asked, "Who sent you?"
