

Chapter 2014 Adriana Fell Into The Sea

Sonia had learned more than language skills from Alexandra. Her capacity to learn was remarkable, mastering martial arts within months. She also picked up shooting skills during her free moments.

Before the leader could respond, Sonia quickly took care of his men with rapid maneuvers.

She then turned to Janet with a stern expression and instructed, "Go into the cabin."

Regaining her composure, Janet dashed towards the cabin.

At that moment, a gunshot echoed from the deck.

Startled, Janet spun around, her heart missing a beat.

Adriana was hit by a bullet while trying to escape. She looked at Janet with wide eyes before collapsing.

"Adriana!" Janet cried out and ran towards her.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

Amidst the gunfire, Janet felt herself being scooped into someone's arms, and they rolled across the deck.

She got up to see Adriana strike the railing and tumble into the sea.

Janet's face went white.

She looked over at Sonia, standing nearby. Had Sonia saved her?

But Sonia frowned and breathed heavily, with sweat dotting her forehead.

Looking down, Janet noticed blood on Sonia's arm.

She was wounded.

"Are you okay?" Janet rushed to help her.

The leader regained his composure. Seeing most of his men defeated, he realized he was outmatched.

"Good, very good."

With a wave of his hand, he quickly led the remaining men off the yacht and steered their boat into deeper waters.

Once they vanished, the yacht's occupants exhaled in relief, embracing tearfully as though they had just survived a catastrophe.

The captain took control of the helm to navigate them back to safety.

Exhausted from the fight and injured, Sonia leaned against the railing, sitting down to catch her breath.

Janet returned to the cabin to grab some gauze and quickly returned to dress the wound.

As she tended to Sonia's arm and reflected on the harrowing incidents that had just occurred, Janet became emotional. "Thank you. If it weren't for you, I..."

Sonia paid no attention and scanned her surroundings.

Her expression turned grave as she surveyed the area.

"Where is Adriana?"

Janet's face twisted with emotion, and she couldn't stop the large tears that started to fall.

"Adriana was shot and fell into the sea. I saw blood in the water. Now we need to get back and organize a search and rescue team."

Sonia remained silent, her gaze lost on the seagulls strutting across the deck.

She was still trying to piece together the events. Who were these attackers?

But Adriana fell into the sea, indicating that it was not part of Alexandra's original plan.

With the plan gone awry, Sonia was uncertain how to report this to Alexandra.

The throbbing pain in her arm clouded her thoughts. It had all happened so suddenly. She couldn't fathom why she had leaped to save Janet.

It seemed almost like a reflex.

Janet picked up on her gloom and distress. Sonia might also be worried about Adriana.

Despite not understanding why Sonia had acted to save her or her connection to Adriana, Janet felt a deep, unspoken trust in her.

Perhaps she was reminded of Laney, whose abilities closely mirrored those of Sonia.
