

Chapter 2027 Mrs. Lawrence Wanted A Divorce

Alexandra was captivated by the rare heterochromatic flower he'd meticulously cultivated. The vibrant bloom, a riot of contrasting colors, held his attention.

The door creaked open, and the assistant announced respectfully, "Boss, Sonia's here."

"Send her in."

Sonia still smarted from the sting of her recent mission failure. Before the bandage on her hand had even healed, she'd been thrown back into rigorous training.

Her steps were silent as she approached Alexandra, lowering her head in a question. "Boss, you wanted to see me?"

Without looking up, Alexandra gestured with a hand. "Sonia, come closer. Smell this flower."

Sonia hesitated for a moment, then obeyed, leaning in to inhale the floral fragrance.

Flowers weren't her forte, and all scents all seemed similar to her.

Alexandra, however, watched expectantly. "What do you think?"

"It smells pleasant."

Alexandra's disappointment was palpable. He lost interest and plucked a flower, handing it to her. His voice took on a seductive quality.

"This flower is delicate and difficult to cultivate. Beautiful flowers for a beautiful woman. Consider it a gift."

Sonia accepted the flower in silence.

"I have a new assignment for you," Alexandra continued. "Mrs. Lawrence is hosting a party in a few days. I need you to find a way in."

Sonia nodded curtly. "What's the objective?"

A cunning glint flickered in Alexandra's eyes as he leaned back against the sofa.

"Janet will be there. Get close to her. Remember your last failure? This time, I want her to experience the dizzying heights of success, followed by a crushing downfall."

Alexandra rose to his feet, brushing past Sonia.

"You disappointed me last time. Don't do it again."

Sonia stood frozen, a suffocating pressure constricting her throat.

The doubts about Alexandra's erratic behavior that had flickered before were now extinguished.

His treatment of her was different, and she couldn't
