

Chapter 2033 Are you crazy

Janet's eyes widened as she looked at Sonia, a feeling of fluster brewing inside.

Sure, Sonia had saved her life, but then Sonia was also this woman's bodyguard. For all she knew, Sonia could move against her at any moment.

As Sonia's gaze, devoid of any emotion, locked with Janet's, she said, "I am indeed her bodyguard."

"Sonia..." Janet stammered, her mind already racing with thoughts of escape.

However, as Sonia had immense strength and could assume a swift capture, escape seemed like a distant dream for Janet.

But then, Sonia's hand on Janet's shoulder tightened subtly, yanking Janet behind her in a single, fluid motion.

The woman, expecting a subdued Janet, froze mid-stride. Her raised palm hung suspended as Sonia's falling hand unexpectedly clamped down on her wrist with surprising strength.

The searing pain in her hand jolted the woman back to reality. Sonia's grip, like a vice, had pinched her raw. "What are you doing? I'm the one who hired you!"

Ignoring the woman's outrage, Sonia executed a swift takedown, slamming her employer face-first onto the floor with a sickening thud.

The woman crumpled to the floor with a surprised yelp, her hands instinctively flying to cradle her stomach as a primal wail escaped her lips.

Even Janet, watching from the side, felt a jolt of fear shoot through her. Maybe it was a special awareness that came with pregnancy, but seeing the other woman stumble and fall, Janet's hand instinctively flew to her stomach and her heart skipped a beat.

"What are you doing? How could you side with her? Are you crazy?" the woman shrieked, her voice laced with a desperate fury.

Sonia's gaze held a hint of indifference as she said casually, "Listen, the money you paid me only covers protection inside the party. People in my line of work have rules. I won't lift a finger outside those boundaries. This girl? Just an acquaintance I helped out. But hey, if you're willing to pay extra, I can throw her down too."

Seeing her chance, the woman scrambled to her feet, her purse swinging wildly at her side. Her face burned with anger as she fumbled to open it, clearly ready to pay whatever it took to get back at Janet.

"Alright, I'll pay you!"

"Six hundred thousand," Sonia said, her voice cold and clear.

The woman's hand froze.

"Do you think I'm stupid? Six hundred thousand? I could hire a whole army of bodyguards for that price! It's clear you're working with her!"

Sonia raised an eyebrow, her voice taking on a sharper edge. "Didn't I mention knowing her? Look, this is just my rate. I don't try to blackmail anyone. If that's too much, maybe you should go."

"You..." The woman exploded, her face burning with fury.

Sonia pretended not to hear the woman's outburst. Instead, she turned to Janet and asked with a raised eyebrow, "Are you okay?"

Janet mumbled in a daze, "I...I'm alright. But why did you help me?"

Sonia's expression stayed neutral as she remarked, "I was just passing by and overheard you. She was clearly bullying you, and I'm also not comfortable with women like this one here. I was doing my job before, but now I don't have to compromise my morals."

Janet exhaled a long sigh of relief, reflecting on how Sonia had tackled her attacker to the floor just now. "Sonia, that was incredible. Thank you for everything. Let's head back now."

"Okay."

As they both prepared to leave, the anger in the eyes of the woman slowly turned to seething hatred.

As they turned to go, the woman snatched a glinting dagger from her bag and aimed it right at Janet. With a strong throw, the dagger whistled through the air.

Sonia, quick on her feet, heard the whoosh and turned just in time to block it.

But the throw was too strong, and the sharp point of the dagger sliced through Sonia's arm, leaving a deep wound. Janet, caught by surprise, could only watch in horror as blood began to gush out of Sonia's wound.