

Chapter 2107 Janet Supports Lexi

For the days that followed, Janet didn't step out of the house. She stayed at home and took care of both herself and her pregnancy.

However, she did this against her will. She felt that she had recovered enough, and had it been up to her, she would have occasionally visited the studio to work. Unfortunately, Brandon was too concerned for her safety to let her do that. He adamantly refused to let her go out, scared that someone might harm her.

When the day of the fashion show came though, Janet put up a fight.

Lexi was going to participate in the design competition on behalf of Rowena Studio. Since it was going to be her first time to participate in the competition alone, Janet wanted to be there to support her.

Brandon raised an objection when she told him about it. "Your staff at the studio can support her. It's not safe for you to go out while pregnant."

The venue for the fashion show was going to be crowded. She could easily get hurt.

Brandon couldn't even bare to think about the consequences if that happened.

"No, it's different! I'm Lexi's boss and she relies on me. She'll feel more at ease with me there." Janet coquettishly clung to Brandon's arm. "I promise to take good care of myself, okay? I won't get hurt."

Reluctantly, Brandon gave in. "Fine, but I have one condition."

"What's that?" Janet asked curiously.

With one hand around her waist, Brandon said in a low voice, "Sonia and I must accompany you. And of course, we'll have several bodyguards with us."

"Of course." Janet agreed with a small smile. She had expected as much.

Happy to have reached a deal with Brandon, Janet quickly changed into a casual professional outfit before leaving.

"I'm ready. Let's go."

Brandon reached out his hand to help Janet downstairs.

When Janet stepped out, she was stunned to see a neatly arranged group of bodyguards standing at the door.

She looked at them, wondering if they were the bodyguards Brandon had hired. They were more than ten.

It was simply too much. If people who didn't know what was happening saw them, they would think they were thugs going to cause trouble.

All she wanted was to go unnoticed, and with these bodyguards, it would simply be impossible. Everyone would be focused on her.

Janet could see all the unfavorable outcomes. Shaking her head slightly, she looked at Brandon. "Four bodyguards would have been enough."

"Janet, we just agreed that the most important thing right now is your safety," Brandon replied firmly.

"I know we made a deal, but this is really too much!" Janet stated, feeling increasingly uneasy as she looked at the tall and strong men.

Brandon frowned at her words.

Too much? Had it been up to him, he would have done more.

Unfortunately, the limited space at the fashion show venue left him no choice.

This disagreement caused a rift between Janet and Brandon for a while.

Sonia, who was back from her long vacation stepped forward to speak for Brandon. "Janet, the venue will be crowded. Anyone could bump into you and that could be dangerous. It's safer to have more bodyguards."

"Exactly! If you think it's too much, I'll ask them to keep a low profile."

With Sonia and Brandon on the same side, Janet didn't have a choice.

"Fine!" She reluctantly gave in, touching her bulging belly.

At the gate, Lexi was preparing for the fashion show, but when she saw Janet come in, she got so excited that she abandoned everything she was doing and enthusiastically waved at Janet.

"Janet, I'm so relieved you came!" Lexi hooked her arm around Janet's and chattered about the details of the show, incessantly asking if she had prepared enough and if the schedule was correct.

Janet nodded repeatedly, smiling as she replied, "You've prepared very thoroughly, Lexi. It's amazing how you achieved this on your own."

Excited, Lexi was about to say more but a voice stopped her.

"Excuse me. I have to stand beside Janet to protect her," Sonia said coldly.

"I'll do anything for you"
