

Chapter 2122 When Did You Get So Close To Each Other

As was routine, the nurse escorted Janet for her daily checkup.

Sonia, Janet's bodyguard, was diligent about accompanying her, even for short trips near the ward.

While traversing the hospital corridor, the nurse suddenly stumbled, causing Janet's wheelchair to wobble.

"Watch out!" Sonia quickly stabilized the wheelchair from both sides, protecting Janet with sharp vigilance.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Larson. I tripped over my foot just now." The nurse apologized immediately.

Before Janet could respond, Sonia addressed the nurse, subtly dismissing her, "Please continue with your duties. I'll take Mrs. Larson for the examination myself."

The nurse, having no option, nodded and walked away.

"Are you okay?" Sonia turned her attention to Janet once they were alone.

Janet nodded, her tone light and teasing, "You're always so vigilant. Has Brandon been increasing your workload without my knowing?"

Sonia's quick reaction to a simple stumble indicated a level of alertness that went beyond typical bodyguard duties.

Laughing off the incident, Sonia replied with a smile, "No. Guarding you has been quite straightforward. My previous clients had many peculiar demands, but you've always ensured I get enough rest."

Lexi, who had been nearby, chimed in, "Exactly, Janet. You're great to your staff. That's why we volunteered to help out during your pregnancy."

Janet turned to look at the two, noting their camaraderie.

Lexi seemed puzzled, unsure if her comment was out of place.

Sensing the moment, Sonia inquired, "What's on your mind?"

"Nothing much. I'm just amused at how close you two have become," Janet said, still smiling.

Back then, Lexi and Sonia barely got along; their meetings often erupted into arguments. It was surprising, then, to see Lexi coming to Sonia's aid today.

Both Sonia and Lexi shared an awkward smile.

Almost simultaneously, they claimed, "We've always been close to each other."

Shortly thereafter, Lexi and Sonia accompanied Janet to the examination room.

Hospital protocol permitted only the patient into the examination room, so Lexi and Sonia found themselves waiting outside.

While Janet was inside, Lexi and Sonia exchanged quick glances.

"I've noticed a middle-aged man loitering in our neighborhood for the past two days," Lexi suddenly mentioned.

"Could you see his face?" Sonia inquired.

Lexi pondered for a moment, then shook her head. "He wore a mask. He wasn't tall and was very thin. Something about him felt off to me."

"Not tall, very thin..." Sonia repeated, frowning her brow.

The description reminded her of someone she had encountered before.

"Could it be Alexandra?" Lexi blurted out, her anxiety palpable as she clutched Sonia's sleeve. "What should we do? Is Alexandra here to get me?"

"The person you described doesn't sound like Alexandra." Sonia quickly reassured her.

"Then who could it be? One of Alexandra's people?" Lexi's voice trembled as she contemplated. "I've heard that powerful families keep private cells. I'm terrified of being locked up."

As her fear escalated, Lexi pressed closer to Sonia, seeking comfort in her presence.
