

Chapter 2127 Sonia Made Her Position Clear

Alexandra mocked Sonia's determination, scolding her harshly. "You fool, you are dying. What's the point of finding your biological mother?"

"It's my decision, and it doesn't concern you!" Sonia replied icily, distancing herself from Alexandra.

"You..." Fuming with anger, Alexandra struggled to control his emotions. "Are you truly willing to sacrifice your life for a woman you've just found?"

He hinted that if Sonia were to humble herself and admit fault, he might reconsider giving her a chance.

However, Sonia did not take Alexandra's offer. She reiterated her position, saying, "Yes, I am willing to do that."

"Fool! Utterly foolish!" Alexandra looked at her as though she were already defeated, his tone laced with mockery and contempt. "When the poison kicks in, I won't give you the antidote even if you beg me."

Mona understood the situation, attempting to speak through the gag covering her mouth, whimpering in frustration.

"Mom, don't worry." Sensing Mona's distress, Sonia comforted her with a gentle touch.

At that moment, Mona turned her head to look at Sonia, her hands gesturing towards Alexandra, her eyes red as if they were bleeding.

Perhaps it was the mother-daughter bond. Even though Mona couldn't speak a complete sentence, Sonia understood that Mona wanted her to plead with Alexandra for mercy to prevent the poison in her body from taking effect.

Having spent many years with Alexandra, she understood his true nature better than anyone else.

Perhaps it was the mother-daughter bond. Even though Mona couldn't speak a complete sentence, Sonia understood that Mona wanted her to plead with Alexandra for mercy to prevent the poison in her body from taking effect.

Having spent many years with Alexandra, she understood his true nature better than anyone else.

She had betrayed Alexandra, so she knew he would never allow her to live to see the end.

His willingness to give her another chance was because she was still useful to him. After he dealt with Brandon and Janet, the next people to die would be her and Mona.

Apparently, Alexandra was unaware that with Brandon's help, the poison implanted by the Barton family could be neutralized.

If he knew, he wouldn't be so confident and wouldn't constantly threaten her with it.

Sonia bowed her head, resting her chin lightly on Mona's shoulder.

After a long pause, Sonia said decisively, "I've been an orphan since childhood. Finding my family has been my greatest dream. Now that I finally have a home, I won't let anything separate me from my mother."

Mona was deeply moved, tears streaming down her face, blurring her vision.

Alexandra, who had once sacrificed his own family for power, still lacked any empathy for Sonia.

"Are you out of your mind?" Alexandra rolled his eyes in disbelief and cursed. "Training a killer like you is a complete waste of the Barton family's resources. I should have thrown you into the sea to feed the fish."

Despite Alexandra's insults, Sonia remained resolute.

Among the bodyguards Alexandra brought, there was one who had previously worked on a mission with Sonia, so the two could barely be considered acquaintances.

The man couldn't bear to watch Sonia betray the Barton family and succumb to poison, so he approached her and tried to persuade her.

"Think carefully. Defying Mr. Barton will not lead to a good outcome."

The acquaintance sighed and whispered a reminder. "If you follow Mr. Barton's orders, you can handle the Barton family's missions and look after your mother simultaneously. However, if you go against him..."

"My mother's health is fragile, and she suffers from mental illness. I can't be away for long periods, so I can't continue carrying out any missions." Sonia shook her head and cut off her acquaintance abruptly.

Realizing Sonia's determination and the futility of further discussion, the acquaintance retreated in silence.

"Have you really made your decision?" Alexandra turned his head to stare at Sonia. "Are you certain you want to betray the Barton family?"

Sonia fell silent.

Everyone assumed Sonia had acquiesced, expecting Alexandra to fly into a rage and kill her and her mother on the spot.

To everyone's surprise, Alexandra didn't order the execution of anyone.

He stood there silently for a long moment before leaving with his bodyguards.
