Chapter 741 Invitation From the Stewarts

Caspian explained, "It's useless to just speculate without any evidence."

He already realized that the Andrewses were related to the matter, but they wouldn't ever admit their involvement without any proof.

Laina replied, "I understand. I'll continue the investigation and gather more evidence as soon as possible."

"Something isn't right with how the king is behaving recently. Be more thorough with your investigation. We need to find out what it is that the Andrewses have to be controlling His Majesty."

"Of course! I'm on it."

Caspian asked, "By the way, has Tom ever told you anything about Skyarch Palace?"

Laina replied, "Yes, Tom had told me about it."

"I believe what happened in the king's residence is related to Skyarch Palace. You should keep it in mind as you continue the investigation."

"I see. I will definitely get to the bottom of all of this."

Caspian hung up and continued to study the Eldorian Scroll fragment.

There was still one technique he hadn't been able to decipher yet.

At the Stewart residence the next day, Carl exclaimed, "Your 71st birthday is in two days, Mom! We're preparing to hold a celebration for you."

Marilyn was still downcast. "Forget it, Henry had just left us not long ago. Just cancel the birthday banquet for this year."

“I understand, Mom. None of us wanted to see Henry leave us like that. But celebrating your birthday is a tradition for the family. Other people might mock us if we skip out on it this year.”

Melinda chimed in, “Yeah! We have to celebrate your birthday! And we’ll even invite both Caspian and Willow.”

Marilyn angrily replied, “Why invite someone so cold-blooded like Caspian? I don’t want to see him.”

“Caspian’s just a civilian now. We can invite him to your birthday banquet and then humiliate him in public to vent our anger!”

“Would he even be bothered by that? The first time he visited our house was also for my birthday banquet.

“And if you remember, he wasn’t the slightest bit angry when we mocked him in front of everyone. In the end, it only angered us even more.”

Carl replied, “It’s not like we can kill Caspian. We’ll at least feel better after we humiliate him in front of everyone this time.”

Alicia felt helpless as she listened to her family discussing plans to humiliate Caspian.

Marilyn replied, “Alright, then. Do as you like.”

Carl replied, “Don’t worry. I’ll handle the planning. Alicia, I need you to send our invitation to Caspian.”

Alicia was puzzled. “Why me?”

“You’re closer to him in age than any of us. It’s just natural that you go.”

“I don’t see the need to invite our enemy to grandma’s birthday banquet.”

Alicia didn't want her family to humiliate Caspian further. She didn't want to see someone who had saved her life once to be put in such an embarrassing spotlight.

Marilyn angrily asked, "What are you hesitating about?"

"Fine!"

Alicia had no choice but to accept the task.

The Stewarts soon sent invitations to every other prominent figure within Southlake City.

Alicia would be heading to Riverside Villa to invite Caspian personally.

Caspian was idling at home alongside Willow, who had nothing to do now that Southlake Corporation HQ was no more.

Suddenly, a Mercedes-Benz appeared in front of Riverside Villa.

The couple walked out of the house toward the car.

Willow asked, "Alicia? Why are you here?"

Alicia replied, "Hello, Willow.

I'm here to invite both of you to the Stewart residence. Here's the invitation."

"What for? Are you remarrying, already?"

Willow assumed that Alicia had already found a new husband after Richard was executed.

"What are you talking about, Willow? Have you forgotten that it's grandma's 71st birthday tomorrow? We're going to hold a birthday banquet for her, and we wanted to invite both you and Caspian to come,"

"I've already forgotten about it... But you could've just given us a call instead

Chapter 742 Gathering of Gods

Sherry explained, "I think it would be more appropriate for you two to show up."

Caspian was confused. "Why, Mom? They don't have any good intentions in mind! They're just thinking of humiliating me now that I've been deposed."

"They may not have their heart in the right places, but it's still an invitation to celebrate the birthday of an elder. We would be deemed disrespectful if we never show up after being invited."

Willow was stunned as she realized what Sherry said made sense.

Sherry continued, "I'm also going with the two of you! I've always wanted to visit your parents, Willow."

Caspian explained, "Mom, the Stewarts are a bunch of vile people. You shouldn't come with us. They'll just make fun of you the entire time."

"I believe they won't cause much trouble for us if we were to show up with generous gifts."

Willow replied, "That makes sense. They would treat us better if we show that we're sincere."

Caspian helplessly declared, "Alright, fine! I'm going as well if you two insist on going."

He didn't really care as he had already experienced the Stewart family's cold welcome once.

Meanwhile, the armored battalion had entered Tigra.

Other countries were overjoyed when they heard the news.

They were starting to have other ideas now that the Diatoranian God of War had just become a civilian without an army.

Byron wanted to regain his honor after he had fled his own capital.

After much thought, he decided to mobilize his troops and marched toward the western borders of Diatoran.

Dax immediately reported the appearance of enemy troops to Balthazar.

Other senior officers were extremely worried after receiving the news as well.

They could always count on Caspian whenever enemies showed up. But now that he had been deposed, who else could they still place their faith in?

The sudden situation at the western borders sent the nearby civilians into a panic.

They reminisced about the days when Caspian was still the Diatoranian God of War, where enemies wouldn't have been so daring.

Diatoran might still have its Champions, but they weren't as influential as Caspian.

The Andrewses were terrified upon learning that the Filrenian army was coming their way.

They had just gained immense power and authority yet were already facing a crisis.

Jerry had no idea what to do next.

When it came to dealing with invaders, a single mistake could destroy the entirety of Diatoran.

Jerry quickly discussed with Kelvin and Zane how to deal with the Filren troops.

"We had just deposed Caspian from his position, and now Filren's trying to attack Diatoran through the western borders. What should we do?"

Kelvin replied, "We have plenty of other talented individuals in Diatoran, Dad. The other four Champions are also formidable generals."

Zane added, "That's right. Besides, Filrenian troops are just fodders. They are n't as strong as they used to be."

Jerry replied, "But the other Champions aren't as intimidating as Caspian was , and that's a fact. We might not be able to win as easily if we were to go to war again. And if we don't retaliate, the entirety of Diatoran may be in deep trouble."

Zane explained, "It's just Filren, Dad. Why are you so worried? Caspian had even occupied their capital once."

"I know. I'm not worried about just Filren. I'm worried about other countries like Astronia and Vadesia. They might take the opportunity to launch an attack as well."

Kelvin asked, "So we need to take action, right, Dad?"

"We've only just been promoted, after all. Besides, we don't really need to defeat the enemy. We just need to make sure to safeguard our borders."

"What do you mean, Dad?"

"We'll try to avoid war if we can by a show of goodwill to Filren."

"What?"

Chapter 743 Uncharacteristic

The next day, the senior officers of Diatoran gathered in the king's residence once more.

All four Champions of Diatoran also showed up.

Balthazar asked, "My fellow men, I'm sure you've already heard that Filrenian troops are now threatening us right at our borders. Who has a plan to defeat our enemies?"

Dax spoke up. "Filren never learns! Your Majesty, allow me to lead my men to expel the Filrenian troops out of our country!"

Keith explained, "Filren is nothing to worry about, Your Majesty. Lord Caspian had already occupied their capital once. We are confident that we can defeat them again!"

Benjamin chimed in, "That's right. It's just Filren. We have nothing to worry about."

Joseph commented, "We already beat Filren to a pulp back then, and now they're back for more? We might as well take this opportunity to wipe out Filren once and for all!"

All four Champions had expressed their agreement to fight back against Filren.

Balthazar asked, "All four of you have made great points. Anyone else that would like to express their opinion?"

A senior officer spoke up. "Your Majesty, I wholeheartedly agree with our Champions. I believe we can defeat Filren."

Another officer commented, "Your Majesty, I believe that this is a good opportunity for us to strike back and destroy Filren once and for all."

Balthazar then turned to Jerry and asked, "Jerry, what do you think?"

Jerry replied, "Your Majesty, I believe we should not fight back against Filren."

Everyone was surprised by Jerry's answer.

They could only wonder why Balthazar's trusted advisor was the only person going against retaliation.

Balthazar asked, "Your reason being?"

Jerry explained, “We already have too many enemies. If we were to start a nother war with

Filren, then Vadesia, Astronia, and even Estrya would also join in the fight to take advantage of the chaos.”

“What do you think we should do, then?”

“I believe we can opt for a friendly exchange with Filren instead.”

Everyone else in the room was in disbelief upon listening to Jerry’s idea.

“We’ve already defeated Filren once. Why should we suddenly lower ourselves in front of them? This has to be a joke!”

“Yeah! Who the fuck do they think they are? Showing them any kindness would only make them even more demanding!”

“Is Diatoran supposed to lower its head toward its enemy? Especially to Filren, of all things?”

Balthazar declared, “Be quiet for a moment and listen to what Jerry has to say.”

The crowd immediately fell silent.

Balthazar asked, “Jerry, please elaborate on your plan. What good will it bring Diatoran if we were to be on friendly terms with Filren?”

Jerry explained, “Your Majesty, with Tigra already an ally on our south, inviting Filren to ally would ensure that we would no longer be surrounded by potential enemies. Vadesia and Astronia are relatively far away from us, and they would never act rashly ever again.”

“What you said makes quite a lot of sense.”

“We’ve just recovered from a war, and our citizens had to bear the brunt of the aftermath. I believe we shouldn’t start another war and should instead seek alternatives that would benefit our people without any bloodshed!”

Jerry then manipulated Balthazar’s thoughts once more.

Balthazar praised, “I’m truly glad to have appointed you as my trusted advisor. Your thoughtful insight will be of great benefit to the citizens of Diatoran!”

“Your Majesty, do you agree with my proposal?”

“Of course I do. Your plan is more beneficial and farsighted.”

Balthazar had long lost his own ability to reason and form thoughts.

All four Champions began to panic,

Dax explained, “Absolutely not, Your Majesty! Diatoran’s reputation would lessen if we were to ally with Filren! Other countries will then follow their example and bully us!”

Joseph chimed in, “Your Majesty, we can’t show weakness to our enemies! Other countries

Chapter 745 Black Moon Technique

Tom and Aria were completely awake as they rushed out of their rooms.

The two of them met up in the living room.

“Tom, you’re awake?” Aria was surprised to see Tom coming from his room with his weapon in hand.

Tom replied, “It sounds like something’s happening behind the house. I was just about to go and check.”

“It might be assassins coming after Lord Caspian.”

Tom nodded and replied, “I think so as well. We should go and see what’s happening.”

He also thought that it was probably assassins coming after Caspian.

Aria and Tom ran toward the back of the house without any hesitation.

Meanwhile, behind the house, Caspian held tightly onto Willow's hand as he faced off against the assassins.

He continued to wave the weapon in his hand.

The assassins coming after him were shredded as if they were made out of paper.

Caspian continued to kill his pursuers with his trusty Diatanium dagger.

Right when the couple was about to escape, Willow suddenly tripped over a stone and fell to the ground.

She then shouted, "Just go, Caspian! Forget about me!"

Willow knew she was only dragging him down as Caspian had to keep her safe.

Any longer, and both of them might be in danger.

"Willow, I would never abandon you," Caspian explained as he picked her up.

The Raging Blade men began to encircle the couple once more.

Flashes of cold steel rushed toward the couple.

The situation had turned dire for Caspian and Willow.

Caspian could have easily taken out all of these assassins if he were alone. But having to protect Willow at the same time made it much more difficult.

Willow was so frightened that all she could do was hug Caspian tightly with her arms. The hug was the only thing left that made her feel safe.

Caspian continued to wield his weapon and fight off the assassins.

The men's weapons were reduced to mere toys when they clashed with the Diatanium dagger.

Caspian managed to escape from the encirclement with Willow in tow.

The men were surprised.

They never expected Caspian to have such a powerful weapon.

Caspian made a big swinging motion with the Diatanium dagger and sent out an arc-shaped shockwave.

The men were all knocked away.

They began to wail in agony, and some of them even had their arms cut off from the shockwave.

Caspian landed on the ground with Willow in his arms and hit the ground running...

But holding Willow in his arms had slowed his movements.

The assassins launched another strike as they intended to kill the couple right then and there.

Willow was so frightened that she closed her eyes.

Suddenly, sounds of metal clashing could be heard nearby.

Following suit were miserable screams.

The men who were trying to attack Caspian were shot and fell to the ground.

The other assassins were startled and took a step back.

Aria shouted, "Lord Caspian, I'm here to help!"

Both Caspian and Willow turned to face the direction of the voice.

They saw that Aria and Tom were running over to them with a gun and a machete in hand.

When Aria saw that Caspian and Willow were in danger, she opened fire at the enemy without hesitation.

The men were so focused on Caspian that they never even noticed that his allies had arrived.

Thus, they were caught off guard and got shot without even getting the chance to react.

They took a second to snap back to their senses.

The Raging Blade men immediately regrouped to organize a counterattack.

They split into two groups, one to continue pursuing Caspian and the other to fend off Aria and Tom.

Aria opened fire as the assassins rushed toward her
