Chapter 761 Eliminating a Threat to Society

After leaving the villa, Aria hailed a taxi.

The taxi driver was a burly man in his 30s. He eyed Aria up and down as soon as she got into the car.

It wasn't common for a seductive lady to get into his car at this hour, heading to a remote place like Lunar Lake.

The driver smirked, showing a subtle hint of malice in his expression. He wondered why Aria was going to the lake.

Seeing Aria's attractiveness, he couldn't resist his desires. He planned to drop her off and assault her then.

Aria had only heard of Lunar Lake but had never been there. As a member of Task Force Rose, she wasn't worried about any potential mishaps.

Initially, the driver followed the navigation, but as they neared the lake, he suddenly veered off course.

"Why are we deviating from the route?" Aria asked cautiously.

"I know a shortcut. It'll save you some money this way," the driver replied.

Aria nodded without saying much. After all, she wasn't worried that the driver would harm her. She would surely teach him a lesson if he dared to make any inappropriate advances.

The driver was very familiar with the area. He knew there was a meadow near Lunar Lake, where there weren't many people, so he planned to take Aria there and force himself on her.

As they continued their journey, Aria noticed the route becoming increasingly isolated, with even the streetlights disappearing.

“Is this the way to Lunar Lake?” Arla asked.

“Yes, this is the shortcut,” the driver replied.

Hearing that, Aria didn’t say much. After all, she wasn’t familiar with this place.

The driver, seeing her lack of suspicion, felt triumphant. He stopped the car in a deserted area, then leered at Aria with ill intentions.

“Why did you stop? This place doesn’t seem like Lunar Lake,” Aria asked.

“Darling, why are you going to Lunar Lake at this hour? Why don’t we do something exciting together instead?” The driver smirked.

At once, Aria understood what was happening.

This driver had probably done similar things before. However, since he met her today, he was about to regret it.

“What kind of exciting thing do you want to do?” Aria asked coldly.

“Don’t play dumb. Some intimate time together, of course. My car has enough space for us to have fun.” The driver grinned wickedly.

“If you don’t want to get beaten up, you’d better start driving me to Lunar Lake. Otherwise, I’ll make sure you regret it.” Feeling anxious to reach her destination, Aria didn’t want to waste any more time.

“Don’t try to scare me, darling. Trust me. I’ll be gentle.” The driver dismissed Aria’s warnings, thinking she was bluffing.

“It seems like you have a death wish,” Aria retorted sharply.

“Come on, darling!” the driver exclaimed excitedly. He thought he had hit the jackpot with such a stunning woman for the first time in his taxi driver career.

Aria had considered getting out of the car but realized the door was locked.

“Want to leave? That’s not happening. Come on. Satisfy me.” The driver suddenly pulled out a dagger and pointed it at Aria.

Aria was about to teach him a lesson when her phone rang unexpectedly.

“Wait. I need to take this call,” Aria said.

“I can let you take the call, but if you tell anyone about this, don’t blame me for being ruthless,” the driver warned.

Aria didn’t reply and answered the call instead.

“Yes, Lord Caspian?” Aria

Chapter 762 Showdown With Three Poisons Hall

As soon as Tom entered the cave, bats flapped around inside.

However, he was brimming with murderous intent. Even the bats dared not approach him.

After walking a dozen steps, Tom saw a flicker of fire within the cave. It was the members from Skyarch Palace who had been waiting there for a long time.

Under the light of the fire, Tom saw many men in black standing there. Their faces were pale, devoid of any vitality.

Seeing them, Tom instantly understood that they were all members of Three Poisons Hall. Only people from Three Poisons Hall would look like this, each one looking like a ghost.

They had also been involved in the wipeout of Greenton.

The people Zane sent to capture Miranda this time were under Three Poisons Hall.

Jethro, the head of Three Poisons Hall, did not personally come. He sent his top mentee, Harley Boyer, to lead this operation. ”

When the members saw Tom appear, they stood still without making any moves.

After all, they had the numerical advantage, so they weren't afraid of Tom causing any trouble.

Likewise, Tom wasn't afraid of these people at all. He continued to walk further into the cave, which widened as he progressed.

Along with it, Tom saw more members of Three Poisons Hall. He realized that it might be difficult to escape unscathed this time.

After walking less than a hundred steps forward, Tom saw a bonfire with dozens of Three Poisons Hall members standing by it.

A skinny man stood in the center. He was none other than Harley, the top member of Jethro.

Harley appeared devoid of vitality as well.

Seeing him, even Tom felt a bit startled. It was the first time he had seen someone like this.

Tom also saw Miranda, who was tied up. She looked terrified.

"Tom, why are you here?" Miranda was both surprised and happy to see Tom.

"Don't worry, Miranda. I'll get you out," Tom said.

"Tom, leave. I don't want to drag you into this," Miranda pleaded.

"I won't leave you behind," Tom said firmly.

At this moment, Harley stepped forward and said, "Tom, did you bring the Black Moon Technique Scroll?"

His voice sounded somewhat ethereal.

"No," Tom immediately replied. He had no intention of handing over the Black Moon Technique Scroll. Since he would have a showdown with these people anyway, he might as well start the fight directly.

Upon hearing Tom's words, Harley became furious. "I said to exchange the Black Moon Technique Scroll for the woman. Do you not want to save her?"

"Why should I listen to you? I'll find another way to save her," Tom retorted.

"How arrogant! Who do you think you are?" Harley exploded with rage.

"I'll never hand over the Black Moon Technique Scroll to you," Tom said fiercely.

"Boy, you're bold, but you're overconfident." Harley scoffed.

"Tom, please leave. These people are terrifying!" Miranda didn't want to drag Tom into this. These people seemed very difficult to deal with.

"Miranda, you're the first woman I've ever loved. How could I leave you behind?" Tom said.

"Don't do this. Risking your life for me isn't worth it. Leave now," Miranda insisted. She believed that Tom could definitely break out on his own with his skills.

"I'll definitely get you out of here," Tom said firmly.

"Tom, I'll ask you again. Where is the Black Moon Technique Scroll? Hand it over, and I'll let your sweetheart go," Harley said maliciously.

His mission this time was to retrieve the

In a cave near Lunar Lake, Tom found himself overwhelmed by the onslaught of Three Poisons Hall members.

As the battle raged on, his injuries grew increasingly severe.

However, he wasn't one to be easily defeated. He continued to fight with all his might.

The memory of the atrocities committed by Three Poisons Hall against Greenton fueled Tom's fury. Roaring with rage, he launched a ferocious attack against the enemies.

With veins bulging on his forehead, he transformed into a killing machine. He wielded the machete and delivered powerful blows to the men.

Limbs littered the ground in the cave, and the air was thick with the scent of blood.

When Harley saw Tom severely wounded yet still fighting fiercely, his expression darkened. The power of Greenton's Black Moon Technique was indeed formidable.

Harley didn't want to drag the fight out any longer. He gestured toward a man dressed in a white robe who had been hiding in the shadows.

Responding to Harley's signal, the man emerged. Among the members of Three Poisons Hall, he was the only one dressed in a white robe, standing out from the rest.

The man in white moved gracefully within the cave, swiftly maneuvering until he stood before Tom. With his right hand outstretched, he viciously slashed across Tom's back.

At that moment, Tom was deeply engaged in the fight and was completely unaware of the situation behind him.

Witnessing someone about to ambush Tom, Miranda was startled.

"Tom, watch your back!" she exclaimed urgently.

However, it was too late. The man's fingers, sharp as blades, viciously dug into Tom's back.

"Ah!" Tom let out a roar, staggering forward several steps.

Looking at his back, he saw that there were five bloody wounds. Fortunately, they were only superficial.

Miranda was shaken to the core by the scene.

Upon regaining his balance, Tom swung his machete and charged toward the man in white.

However, the man slipped away swiftly into a corner of the cave, evading Tom's pursuit.

Following that, the members of Three Poisons Hall resumed their assault on Tom while the man in white sought opportunities to strike.

Due to the injuries earlier, Tom's movements had become sluggish.

Aria followed the passage deeper into the cave. The sounds of the fight grew clearer with each step.

The thought of Tom being in danger made her anxious. Without hesitation, she grabbed her pistol and rushed in.

As she entered, Aria saw numerous individuals standing there. Upon seeing the grim-faced, pallid figures of the men in black, she was startled.

These members of Three Poisons Hall stood guard within the cave's passage way, yet they made no move to attack.

Though they were surprised by Aria's sudden intrusion, they didn't take her seriously.

Seeing them, Aria raised her pistol and unleashed a barrage of bullets at the group.

At once, gunshots echoed through the cave.

The men were taken aback. They hadn't expected Aria to start killing without a word.

Before they could react, more than ten of them lay dead from gunshot wounds. Though they were skilled fighters, the members of Three Poisons Hall were defenseless against firearms.

Aria, initially apprehensive of their prowess, gained confidence after witnessing the effectiveness of her weapon.

It seemed these creepy Individuals were no match for the members of Ragin

Initially, the members of Three Poisons Hall had considered retaliation, but Aria's weaponry made them hesitate. She left them no choice but to flee.

Just as Aria was about to shoot, Harley grabbed Miranda and pulled her in front of himself.

Harley wasn't foolish. He didn't want to be a sitting duck for Aria's gunfire, so he used Miranda as a shield against the bullets.

Seeing this, Aria couldn't continue shooting. However, rescuing Miranda meant engaging in a battle with these people.

Aria's attention then turned to the man in the white robe.

Among all the members of Three Poisons Hall, he was the only one dressed differently, making him stand out. Aria decided to target him first.

Aria pulled the trigger once more, aiming at the man. But just as the bullet was about to hit him, he disappeared into thin air.

“What are you standing around for? Get them!” Harley commanded as he waved his hand. He didn’t want to waste any more time here.

Only then did the men snap out of their daze and rush toward Aria and Tom.

Tom couldn’t afford to be careless. He raised his machete, preparing to face the onslaught.

Meanwhile, Aria continued firing, covering Tom.

Under Aria’s assault, many of the men fell dead.

Unfortunately, Aria had only brought a limited number of bullets. Just as she emptied her magazine, the men closed in on her.

Startled, Aria realized she didn’t have time to reload, and she was unarmed.

In that moment of peril, someone wrapped an arm around her slender waist and lifted her off the ground.

Aria was stunned. She turned around and saw that it was Tom.

Tom had rushed over to rescue Aria when he saw her in danger, disregarding any sense of decorum.

With deadly precision, Tom swept through the attackers with his machete, knocking several of them down.

Meanwhile, Aria was feeling slightly embarrassed. This was the first time she had been in such close proximity to a man. What made it worse was that Miranda was watching nearby.

Before Aria could contemplate further, a voice echoed in.

“Stop standing there! Grab a weapon and fight!” Tom urged.

Aria snapped out of her daze and picked up a machete from the ground.

The two stood back to back, engaging in a life-and-death struggle with their enemies.

As a member of Task Force Rose, Aria had received training in self-defense and was proficient in using various weapons.

However, they were outnumbered. There were just too many members of Three Poisons Hall present.

The two of them simply couldn't withstand the opponent's relentless assault.

Suddenly, Tom was ambushed from behind by the man in white. The attack sent him flying.

During this gap, the enemies seized the opportunity to capture Aria.

"Stop!" Harley commanded when he saw his men apprehend Aria.

He didn't want Tom to die. Otherwise, they'd never obtain the Black Moon Technique Scroll.

Tom was already heavily injured. Continuing the fight would only lead to his defeat.

"Tom, I'll give you one last chance. Where is the Black Moon Technique Scroll?" Harley asked coldly.

"I don't know," Tom replied disdainfully.

"Fine. Since you want to do this the hard way, don't blame me for being ruthless.

Harley's patience had worn thin.

He wouldn't waste any time here if it weren't for the scroll.

"What do you want to do?" Tom asked, suddenly feeling uneasy.

“Since you refuse to hand over the scroll, I’ll take pleasure in humiliating these two women right here,” Harley said with a wicked grin.

Arla and Miranda were terrified upon hearing his words.

Meanwhile, Tom was furious. He was stunned by Harley’s despicable tactics of threatening him.

“Orilon, on the outskirts of Southlake City,” Tom reluctantly revealed where the Black Moon Technique Scroll was hidden.

Miranda was momentarily stunned. Tom had mentioned Orilon to her before.

How could he be so dumb? Couldn’t he have just made up a random location? Their enemies couldn’t verify it immediately anyway.

Tom was an honest man. He was preoccupied with saving Miranda and Aria, so he hadn’t thought much about it when he disclosed the information.

“That’s too broad. Give me the specific spot,” Harley demanded.

Orilon was vast. The Black Moon Technique Scroll could be anywhere.

“There’s a hundred-year-old tree to the west of Orilon. I buried the scroll under it,” Tom disclosed the specific location of the scroll.

Aria didn’t know where the scroll was hidden. She thought Tom had just mentioned a random place to deceive the members of Skyarch Palace.

As long as they could buy a little more time until Caspian arrived, they could turn the tide of the battle.

Aria had already reported the situation here to Caspian before entering the cave. It was about time for him to arrive.

“Okay. I hope you’re not lying to me. Otherwise, I’ll put you in a living hell!” Harley threatened viciously.

“I’ve told the truth. I hope you keep your promise and release them,” Tom said

“Don’t rush it. I’ll send someone to Orilon to find the scroll now. I’ll naturally release them once my people retrieve it. But if you dare to deceive me, none of you will survive,” Harley threatened grimly.

He wasn’t foolish enough to release these women immediately. What if Tom was lying?

However, he didn’t intend to spare Tom even if they found the scroll. Tom was the only living member of Greenton, and keeping him alive would only cause trouble.

The same applied to Aria. Many of Harley’s men had died at her hands, so he wanted to avenge them.

+15 BONOS

“Then, send someone quickly. Orilon isn’t far from Southlake City.” Tom knew Harley wouldn’t release Aria and Miranda before he got the scroll.

Harley’s excitement grew at the prospect of obtaining the scroll.

He sent some men to search for the scroll and left some to guard Tom’s group.

Just as the search team was about to leave, a sense of murderous intent suddenly emanated from outside the cave.

Everyone was stunned, unsure of what was happening outside.

At that moment, a domineering figure walked in, holding a dagger with a furious expression. It was none other than Caspian.

The members of Three Poisons Hall were terrified when they saw him.

They had heard of Caspian's reputation. Even Darren was no match for him. This proved his immense power.

Caspian struck the men as soon as he saw them.

Those men didn't even have time to react before Caspian slit their throats.

Some of them managed to escape and shouted, "Shit! Caspian is here!"

The people inside the cave were shocked to hear the shout.

Meanwhile, Tom's group felt a glimmer of hope. With Caspian's arrival, the situation would surely take a turn for the better. They had great confidence in his strength.

Caspian stormed into the cave, easily overpowering the members of Three Poisons Hall.

Wherever he went, corpses littered the ground behind him.

Finally, Caspian saw Tom and the others in the cave.

Tom asked, "Why are you here, Lord Caspian?"

He hadn't informed Caspian about this, so how did he know?

"Tom! Watch your back!" Miranda reminded.

Feeling someone behind him, Tom quickly turned around, only to find the hands of the man in white reaching toward him again. His five fingers were like sharp Knives.

Unable to evade in time, Tom used his machete to block in front of him.

At once, a crisp sound echoed. Tom was forced back several steps by the powerful force. He even felt his arms go numb.

Just as the man in white was about to attack again, Caspian intervened.

A glint of cold light flashed before the man. He couldn't dodge in time and was pierced through the heart by Caspian.

The man spat out blood and fell to the ground, lifeless.

He had been causing trouble in secret all this while and was finally dealt with by Caspian.

Seeing this, both Aria and Miranda breathed a sigh of relief.

It was precisely because of that man that Tom hadn't been able to maximize his full strength.

The following battle was like crushing ants. Caspian swiftly charged toward Harley once again and killed him in a move.

Harley didn't expect the vast difference in strength between him and Caspian.

Upon witnessing Harley's demise, the members of Three Poisons Hall were thrown into complete disarray.

"Lord Caspian, they all know where the Black Moon Technique Scroll is hidden. We can't let them escape!" Aria immediately spoke up, fearing that these people might leak the whereabouts of the scroll.

Caspian nodded. He had no intention of leaving any survivors either.

The men had lost their fighting spirit and only wished to flee, but it was already too late. Caspian wouldn't let them go.

Tom also joined in the pursuit.

With both of them working together, they wiped out all the members of Three Poisons Hall in the cave.

The entire cave was filled with a thick smell of blood.

“Miranda, why did you wander around?” Caspian put away his Diatanium dagger and approached Miranda.

“I didn’t. I just wanted to buy some ingredients to make something nice for Willow since she’s pregnant,” Miranda explained somewhat aggrievedly.

However, she knew that she had caused trouble for Caspian.

Caspian felt a bit awkward. Miranda meant well, but sadly, Willow wasn’t pregnant.

Of course, Caspian wouldn’t reveal the truth.

“Tom, Aria, check for any survivors,” Caspian instructed.

Tom and Aria nodded and searched the cave again. Only after they ensured that there were no survivors did they leave the cave.

As they exited the cave, they saw a group of people rushing toward them.

“Who are they?” Aria asked in surprise.

“The Masseys’ bodyguards,” Caspian replied, recognizing a few of them.

“The Masseys? What are they doing here?” Aria asked, puzzled.

Caspian didn’t answer as he also didn’t know the reason.

“Are you alright, sir?” one of the bodyguards anxiously asked as he approached Caspian.

“And why is that? Who sent you here?” Caspian asked.

“Mr. Massey left us here to protect you,” the bodyguard replied.

Hearing this, the bodyguards felt awkward. They were here out of goodwill, but Caspian didn’t appreciate it at all.

However, they wouldn’t get angry about it. After all, Caspian was the heir of the Massey family.

Caspian took Tom and the others into the car and left the area, leaving the bodyguards behind.

The bodyguards had come here and done nothing, only to return now.

As soon as everyone left, the man in white in the cave suddenly opened his eyes

"What's going on? Why is there a pit here? It looks like the soil has just been dug up. Could someone have taken the scroll?" Aria said worriedly.

Tom quickly knelt and started digging through the soil with his hands.

But no matter how hard he searched, there was no trace of the scroll.

Tom's heart was in turmoil. The Black Moon Technique Scroll was missing!

"Shit! The scroll has been stolen!" Tom was in a panic.

"Are you sure you hid it here?" Caspian asked.

"I remember it clearly. It was right here. It's really gone," Tom answered, feeling helpless.

He finally decided to practice the Black Moon Technique, only to discover that the scroll had been stolen.

"It means someone from Three Poisons Hall survived and took the scroll before us," Aria analyzed.

"Damn it!" Tom gritted his teeth and pounded the ground with his fists.

"Now that it's happened, there's no use regretting it," Caspian consoled.

“Lord Caspian, the Black Moon Technique Scroll is a family heirloom. My revenge depends on it.

“But now that the scroll is gone, I can’t improve my strength. It seems I won’t be able to avenge Greenton or my father,” Tom said. Tears were welling up in his eyes.

“Calm down, Tom. This is all my fault. If it weren’t for me, your scroll wouldn’t have been lost,” Miranda said, feeling guilty.

As soon as she said that, she started crying too.

“Enough of this crying. I’ll eradicate Skyarch Palace. You two don’t need to worry about it,” Caspian said calmly.

“Lord Caspian, are you serious? Skyarch Palace has many experts! I heard they even have many innate grandmasters! What if you’re not their match?” Tom expressed his concern.

“Innate grandmasters are considered strong? I became an innate grandmaster when I was 18 years old. They’re just a bunch of ants to me,” Caspian said confidently with a smirk.

“What?” Tom was stunned by Caspian’s words.

Was Caspian bragging? Innate grandmasters were extremely rare in Diatoran, and Caspian became one at 18 years old? Just how strong was he now?

“Let’s focus on what to do next,” Caspian said. He rarely mentioned his strength to others.

“Maybe the person who stole the scroll hasn’t gone far yet. We might be able to retrieve it if we chase them now,” Aria suggested.

“It’s too late. They arrived ahead of us even though we drove here. It shows that they have exceptional speed. There’s no point in wasting our efforts,” Caspian said calmly.

For Caspian, even if Skyarch Palace had the Black Moon Technique Scroll, they still wouldn't be a match for him.

After that, Caspian drove the car and took everyone back to Riverside Villa.

In less than an hour, they arrived home.

"Caspian is finally back!" Cecilia exclaimed as soon as the car stopped.

Following her voice was the aroma of food.

"Cecilia, why aren't you staying at the dorm today?" Caspian asked.

"Caspian, it's the weekend. Did you forget?" Cecilia chuckled.

Then, Willow also came out.

"You're finally back!" Willow was relieved to see everyone return safely.

Apart from Tom suffering from some injuries, everyone else was unharmed. "Willow, I'm sorry for making you worry," Tom said awkwardly.

"There will be opportunities. Just stay still for now. Take this time to reflect."

Caspian's expression turned ugly at Balthazar's words.

He was probing Balthazar earlier. Nothing had happened five years ago on this day. The day he was honored with the tit le of Diatoranian God of War coincided. with Diatoran's victory. Balthazar couldn't have forgotten.

"By the way, do you know the details of what happened to the Massey family and why your father, Logan, was disgraced?" Balthazar asked.

Caspian was stunned for a moment at the mention of this topic. Why would Balthazar suddenly bring this up?

"I don't," Caspian respectfully replied.

He sensed something amiss. Balthazar was behaving very strangely.

"Because Logan deliberately abandoned you. Also, your mother didn't run away from home. Logan drove her out."

Caspian might have believed Balthazar's words in the past. But after their strange conversation, he began to have doubts.

He hadn't asked Balthazar about this, yet Balthazar suddenly mentioned the Massey family. Clearly, it was brought up with a strong purpose.

Balthazar wanted to further strain Caspian's relationship with the Massey family.

Caspian was now sure that Balthazar had indeed been manipulated. However, he wasn't sure why Balthazar was being threatened by Jerry.

"I would never acknowledge a person like Logan as my father. I'd rather kill him," Caspian deliberately said.

He knew that only by expressing his stance could he appease Jerry.

After all, Jerry's greatest fear was Caspian regaining control of the military.

"Nevertheless, you must not fully trust everything Logan says," Balthazar said before ending the call.

At the King's residence, Balthazar collapsed as soon as he hung up the phone.

"Hahahal Caspian is quite funny. He's already in trouble himself, but he still wants to return to the king's side," Zane sneered.

“Although Casplan has lost his official position, he still commands respect. It might be difficult to deal with him,” Jerry expressed his concern.

“Dad, you’re overestimating Casplan. He’s now a lone wolf without military power. We have no reason to fear him,” Kelvin dismissed.

“Who knows for sure? Casplan was dismissed by the king before, but the king still called him back. To prevent such a thing from happening again, I must issue an order in the king’s name so that he’ll never recall Casplan again.

“This way, Casplan’s followers will give up on him entirely,” Jerry said sinisterly.

Our move is like removing the source of trouble! By then, nobody will stand by Casplan’s side anymore. We must capture Casplan alive and torture him.

On the other end, Casplan was filled with doubts after the call. He couldn’t understand why Balthazar didn’t seek help despite being controlled.

He then called Laina.

“Yes, Lord Casplan?” Laina answered respectfully.

“How’s the investigation going?” Casplan asked.

“Lord Casplan, Skyarch Palace has many secrets, and there are many organizations within it. Various factions and sects have joined, and there are many talented individuals I’ve never heard of before,” Laina reported.

“Be careful not to arouse suspicion from its members. I just spoke with His Majesty.”

Yesterday, the Massey family's bodyguards, who were in Southlake City, reported Caspian's rescue mission to Logan.

Upon hearing this, Logan became even more convinced that Caspian and Sherry would be in danger in Southlake City, so he flew there again to bring them back.

"We're having dinner. Not meeting guests now." Caspian walked out and closed the door behind him.

"Sherry, I've reserved my family's best property for you. No one will disturb you. It's a standalone place with caretakers," Logan added from outside the door.

Witnessing Logan's humility, Denzel felt a pang of sympathy.

Logan was known for his stubbornness and pride. He rarely lowered himself like this.

"Caspian, do you think-"

Before Sherry could finish her sentence, Caspian stood up again. He took out his Diatanium dagger and opened the door, pointing it at Logan.

The sudden surge of killing intent made Denzel shiver, and he immediately stood before Logan.

"Sir, please don't get so worked up. Let's talk things over calmly," Denzel said nervously.

"I'll say it again. Leave now, or face the consequences." Caspian's words carried a hint of menace.

Denzel was so intimidated by Caspian's presence that he could hardly catch his breath.

Logan pushed Denzel aside and addressed Caspian, "Caspian, if you hate me that much, then go ahead and do it. As long as you can forgive me."

With that, Logan closed his eyes.

"You want to do things the hard way, right?"

Caspian gritted his teeth, suddenly brandishing his Dlatanium dagger. His great force caused a gust of wind to appear, almost knocking Denzel over.

Yet he managed to stand in front of Logan in time.

Seeing this, Sherry exclaimed in shock, and others rushed out, too.

They all thought Caspian just wanted to drive Logan away, but they never expected him to strike.

Caspian's dagger shot toward Logan. In his desperation, Denzel pushed Logan away.

At the critical moment, Caspian quickly withdrew his attack, avoiding a tragedy. Otherwise, Denzel would have been killed.

Caspian's sudden aggression caught Logan off guard. He hadn't expected Caspian to attack him.

"Logan, are you hurt?" Sherry rushed to Logan's side, showing her concern.

Logan shook his head. Although he had been a little furious earlier, receiving Sherry's concern made everything worth it.

Seizing the opportunity, Logan took Sherry's hands and looked at her affectionately. "I'm fine. Just a little startled."

"Don't blame Caspian. He's been adopted since childhood. Neither of us has been by his side, so it's normal for him to have some resentment," Sherry said, tears welling up in her eyes.

"I won't blame him. I just hope he can understand and trust me. One day, he'll understand the truth and acknowledge me as his father. Even if I have to wait until the day I die-"

Before Logan could finish his sentence, Sherry covered his mouth. "Don't say such pessimistic words."

Suddenly, a warm surge of emotion flooded Logan's heart, reminiscent of the time when he first met Sherry in his youth.

Sherry felt shy from his stare in front of so many youngsters. She immediately pushed him away.

“Go now, or Caspian will get angry again,” Sherry said, pushing Logan away again.

Helpless, Logan could only wave goodbye and leave with Denzel..

After leaving Riverside Villa, Logan remained silent.

“Didn’t you see the affection between Mom and Mr. Massey just now? They both deeply love each other. You can’t just let Mom be alone. She’ll need to have a companion,” Willow said.

Caspian naturally saw that his mother cared a lot about Logan.

“Don’t simply draw conclusions. The Massey family has never treated my mom well. She definitely won’t go back to them,” Caspian said impatiently.

Hearing that, Willow stomped her foot in anger, not wanting to deal with Caspian anymore.

Meanwhile, in the King's residence, the Andrews family looked worried. They had been negotiating with Filren for a long time, but the result was still unsatisfactory.

Zane had returned to Dhord City with the envoy, while the envoy from Filren had also returned.

The negotiations ultimately ended in failure.

"Zane, isn't Manny supposed to be a specialist in diplomacy? Why didn't his intervention work?" Kelvin asked.

"Filren won't budge. It's useless no matter what we send. Filren knows that we don't dare to declare war. So, they won't back down," Zane sighed and said.

Jerry was now in regret. He had made friendly gestures toward Filren to ensure Diatoran's stability, but it resulted in the current situation.

"Why don't we just declare war? Caspian has struck Filren's capital before. They're probably weakened now," Zane said angrily.

"We don't have the capital to fight them. Are you going to the frontlines?" Jerry asked, displeased.

"We still have four other War Gods, don't we? They can also join the battle," Zane suggested.

He was only good at wandering around in the streets. How would he dare to lead troops into battles?

"Warfare requires morale among the soldiers. Caspian has been dismissed, and many soldiers are dissatisfied.

"If Filren starts a war, other countries will definitely not sit idly by. What if they also attack Diatoran? Then, we'll be in a passive defense," Jerry analyzed.

He wasn't afraid of fighting. Instead, he feared that other countries besides Filren would intervene.

Previously, Diatoran was attacked from all sides, but Caspian turned the tide of the battle.

"Many people want Caspian to return to his position. Once a war breaks out, these voices will only grow louder."

Jerry knew that once they were at war, people would remember the invincible Diatoranian God of War.

More citizens would step forward to request Caspian's return.

"Public opinion is overwhelmingly in favor of Caspian now. Why don't we restore his title as the Diatoranian God of War first? We can deal with him once the situation stabilizes."

"After all, we can control the king. We can deal with Caspian however we want," Kelvin proposed.

"No way! We've worked tirelessly to come to this point. Allowing Caspian to reclaim his title would be like releasing a dragon from the dungeon. This plan is out of the question," Jerry retorted firmly.

"Nowadays, everyone hopes for Caspian's reinstatement because they believe he can lead us to victory. If Caspian fails, they won't have much to say," Zane said.

Jerry's expression brightened at those words. The current public support for Caspian was due to the belief that he could defeat Filren.

But if Caspian were to be killed, his supporters would surely not say anything anymore. The priority was to stabilize the people and then resume
