

Chapter 184 Stiffen

Alayah's p.o.v.

"But as the Alpha you can change the rules, Baby Girl." Dad says and I know that I have a lot to think about.

"Why don't we just let Alayah think about everything? This concerns her more than anyone else and we will be there when and if she needs to talk to someone. We will keep her heritage a secret for now and by the time the Alpha and Luna Ceremony comes around Alayah might have made some decisions." Dad says.

My mind is running a hundred miles an hour, I really hate my life right now. I thought I had a tough decision to make when I found out I was never told about my Father's family, but that turned out just fine. Then I found out I was the rightful Beta to Crimson Moon Pack and as I went looking for Anton I thought he would hand it over without fighting for it, but I didn't want the position. It wasn't difficult to make Anton see that I didn't want it and that he had every right to the title.

When Grandfather told me about my bloodline I asked him not to tell anyone, unless it was absolutely necessary. I needed to deal with the fact that someday after my eighteenth birthday I would receive an ability or maybe even more and I think that deep down inside of me I felt relieved when I didn't get an ability. I mean, I know of Wolves and Lycans that have an ability and they live rather normal lives with the emphasis on rather.

They only travel out of their territory when it is absolutely necessary and always with an escort for protection. The Council of Elders always makes sure they find their true Mate-bond, because that means they will be protected to the fullest extent of the word. I was never sure if I wanted the Council of Elders to know about any ability I might get, but I knew that they would protect me at all costs if I ever told them about my bloodline.

Then I was faced with my next predicament when Topaz told me that she felt a connection to four Brothers, four Brothers that happen to be my Stepbrothers and that of course made me think of all the obstacles I would be facing. Well, not just me of course because they would be faced with them as well and I think I felt relieved when Mom told me that no one in Crimson Moon Pack would hold it against us. I think my biggest concern on that topic is how the rest of the world will react when they find out that I have a Mate-bond with my Stepbrothers.

To top it all off I find out I am the rightful heir to Blood Stone Pack and my bloodline finally makes sense to me. Now I have so many decisions to make, so many directions my life can take and right now I am not sure which direction I would choose. Yeah, I really hate my life right now and I am starting to get a huge headache because of it.

"Let's just concentrate on one thing at the time." Topaz says in my head and I ask her what she thinks we should put our focus on first, "The connection I feel, if we can get that resolved we can concentrate on the rest. They will protect us no matter what this connection turns out to be, because if there is no Mate-bond there is still a sibling bond and Mom and Dad will make sure they keep us safe." Topaz explains and I let her words run through my mind for a few moments.

It would at least be one less thing to worry about for me and I hope it will also mean that the Boys get some peace of mind. Crimson Moon Pack won't be much of a problem to deal with, some females might not like the fact that it means four less males that could be their Mates. Autumn Pack might be a completely different story, especially seeing the fact that I know of at least four females that think they have a claim to Noah, Nathan, Nikolay and Nero.

Maybe I should talk with them about this connection we all feel, about how they see our future and how we are going to deal with Pack-members that might have something against our Mate-bond if that is the bond this connection will become. I need to keep in mind that I am not alone in this situation, the four Brothers are in this situation with me and they need to be able to come to terms with where this connection is leading us.

I know they want to find out where this connection will lead us and I want to find out as well, I just hope it won't make our lives more complicated. None of us asked for this complication, none of us asked for this connection and we didn't ask for everything else that comes with it. However, it is a part of our lives right now and I hope the five of us can come to a solution for whatever crosses our path along the way.

"Okay, let's take this hurdle first. We will take this one step at the time, Topaz." I say to her before I turn my attention back to the others in the room, only to find out it is just me and Nero left. "Where did everyone go?" I ask as I am looking around the room and as he smiles at me I hear Noah calling, "Not that far away, Angel." from the kitchen and from the noises I hear I can tell that he isn't alone in the kitchen.

It only takes a few minutes before the others walk back into the living room and Noah has a tray in his hands with some snacks and refreshments. Nathan tells me that Mom and Dad got called to the Alpha office and I decide there is no better time than the present, "I think we need to talk about the connection between us." I say and I feel Nero's body stiffen.
