

Chapter 17

William could hear the buzzing sound in his ears when he heard Fernando's voice.

Felicity didn't come back home because she went to have a meal with Fernando.

Raw anger shot through William at the thought of this.

No wonder Felicity avoided making eye contact and talking with him when he was about to leave the Bai family a while ago.

Hmph, did she go against her heart and meet up with Fernando in order to get on the good side of the Genuine Care Medical Center?

Didn't she know that she was putting herself in danger despite having a much easier way readily available right in front of her?

She agreed to have a meal together with him, but she ended up making him wait alone like a fool.

William hung up the phone, his eyes turning moist.

He shut his eyes. It took him five minutes to calm down.

When he opened his eyes again, his gaze was filled with indifference.

He took out his cell phone and made a call to

Melissa. "Take down all the companies under Fernando and his family!"

Melissa was having her meal in the Genuine Care Medical Center. When she heard this, she almost dropped her phone.

Since the day before, she'd been on the edge of her seat whenever she received William's call.

Every time William called her, he was sending her different versions and scales of horrors and surprises.

"Do you know what you're talking about?" Melissa asked William depressingly.

He replied with a cool indifference. "Of course, I do. Are you in the office?"

After hearing Melissa's answer, William hung up the phone.

Ten minutes later, he rushed to the Genuine Care Medical Center and appeared in front of Melissa.

Melissa was about to give him the rough edge of her tongue. However, she dared not raise her voice at him when she saw William's icy-cold face.

"Did you just say that you wanted to uproot all the companies under Fernando's family?" Melissa asked cautiously.

William gave an indifferent nod.

"But after all, we are still a reputable and much-respected clinic," Melissa said hesitantly. After a while, she continued, "If we were to use some tricks behind their backs, I'm afraid that we will taint our image."

William nodded again. "You're right. So, let's defeat them openly and honestly."

Hearing this, Melissa almost fell to the ground.

She wanted to knock some senses into him so much.

"Do you know how powerful the Timber Group is? Do you know how much manpower they have? It is going to be very difficult even if we were to make a move behind their back. Do you think we will stand a chance of beating them if we confront them head-on? We would need to have a solid reason and a plan if you want to take them down. Or are you deliberately attempting to ruin our medical center?" Melissa went ballistic and roared at William, paying no heed to her image.

However, William did not move an inch, his face remained cold. "A solid reason? Let's say they are manufacturing fake medical products."

Melissa's head was about to explode. She was completely speechless.

What a solid reason he gave!

No matter how she looked at it, it sounded like a groundless claim William made up.

William repeated, "Do as I say."

Melissa's anger was ignited again.

Who did he think he was to act like a tyrant every time?

Melissa thought, "Sure, I am going to let it pass as of now, but I'm not going to hold it in for the rest of my life!"

Judging on William's poker face, Melissa knew right away that Fernando must be laying his finger on Felicity again.

So, was Felicity the reason William went furious?

Regardless, he should be more realistic!

Why must he ruin the medical center for the sake of his own benefits?

Melissa was too lazy to argue with William, hence she decided to report this to her grandfather, Harper Wang directly.

She gave Harper a tongue-lashing for at least ten minutes on the phone before Harper told her, "Do as he says."

Melissa threw her cell phone onto the ground this time.

Both of them—the young and the old—must have gone insane!

William, being the young one was frivolous, arrogant, and stubborn!

Meanwhile, Harper, the old one turned a deaf ear to all her concerns.

Melissa was so pissed off!

All the effort she poured in this medical center was going to be ruined by both of them.

At this moment, Lydia entered the room with a confused look. "Oh, you're here, Willy. I'm going to report to you that the 100 bottles of sample ointments you asked for has been produced."

William nodded and complemented, "Good job. I'll get Melissa to raise your pay."

Melissa's fury sprang to life in an instant. She took a pillow and threw it at William.

"By the way, Willy, this ointment does not have a name yet. Why don't you give it a name?" Lydia didn't notice that Melissa was on the verge of exploding.

For no reason, William's heart missed a beat. "Let's call it the... Cherry Blossom..."

"Cherry Blossom..." Lydia repeated and clapped her hands. "What a beautiful name! From the name, I can picture a chivalrous gentleman standing beside a lady with the fairest skin in the world. William, you are a genius! By the way, should we run the test now?"

William shook his head and answered, "No, let's put it aside now. I have to take down Fernando first."

Melissa was really going to explode.

When she heard the name William gave to the product a while ago, she had to admit that William was indeed a smart cookie.

However, in the blink of an eye, he went back to the topic of getting his revenge again.

Did Fernando do something as bad as a wild beast? Did he ravage William's ancestral graves?

What did Fernando do to make William focus on destroying his family while putting aside something as important as testing the ointment?

"Go to hell, both of you!" Melissa bellowed and slammed the door.

"Where's your another Spring Bracelet?" William asked before she went off.

Melissa staggered to her feet and yelled, "Stay the f*ck away from me!"

When William returned home, he found Felicity sleeping on the table.

His heart could not help aching for her as he walked up to her. He wanted to pat her head, but his hand froze in mid-air when Fernando's voice in the call came to his mind.

He pondered, "What are you thinking about, Felicity?"

At this very moment, Felicity made a groan before she turned around and saw William. Her face immediately lit up. "William, you're back. I've been waiting for you."

William glanced at the food on the table which had already went cold and asked, "Didn't you eat with Fernando?"

Felicity's eyes darkened right away, her smile frozen on her face. "I'm sorry, William. I should have told you. Fernando said that I can pay off the favor I owed him if I had dinner with him. I believed his words. However, when I went to the washroom, you called me..."

Felicity lowered her head and added, "Then I have a quarrel with him. I reckon that you must be furious, so I came back right away. Only to find that you were not at home..."

Felicity peeped at William and mumbled, "Are you still angry at me?"

Hearing her explanation, William's heart melted at once. What a silly woman...

"I'll go heat up the food," said William.

"I'll go with you." Felicity followed behind him, helping him to carry the dishes to the kitchen as though she wanted to stick to William all the time.

"William, there are so many things that happened today. It must be so difficult for you," said Felicity hesitantly while they were in the kitchen.

William's expression did not change. He knew that Felicity must be feeling much more devastated than him.

"Sigh, at times, I really wish to move out of this family once I have enough money to buy us a small house. I don't mind any kind of hardship as long as we are living together. Our life would be much easier compared with now. At least we don't have to get bullied by them," Felicity lamented.

Although Felicity did not mean that at all, her words had already etched in William's heart without her realizing it.

"How big house do you want to buy?" He asked, his eyes sparkling with tenderness.
