

Chapter 40 You know how to cook?

At the end of the day, in order to give him a treat, Elena took Joey to the market and personally selected the ingredients.

Looking at her, Joey was a little confused. She knows how to cook?

"Miss, you, you know how to cook, huh?" Joey said with dumbfounded eyes.

He could totally tell that she was professional and probably even a little tougher than he thought she was.

"I never say I couldn't cook!" Elena felt that the shocked Joey was really funny.

"When you first came to my place, wasn't it obvious there were dishes in my kitchen and the kitchenware was all used."

Joey shook his head, "Yeah, I thought you hired a nanny who cooked!"

Elena didn't refute, "Yes, I hired one, but she is generally responsible for washing dishes and cleaning up the kitchen, and I do the food."

She used to cook for Alston. When Alston did not need it, she had always been a lazy person, and did not want to cook for herself, let alone doing dishes.

Joey was completely convinced. After all, last time in her home, as soon as she finished eating, she slipped away.

Joey carried the bag, Elena got some seasoning, and the two went back to the place where they lived and talked to hotels to use their kitchen.

When Elena was cooking, those hotel chefs even gathered around to watch and let out a "wow" sound.

Joey had to say, "You are really great, how can you do everything so well!"

Elena shrugged and looked at him, who had completely failed to notice that himself was just the same, and said, "Is that so? But if I remember correctly, you are the standard all-rounder."

Joey couldn't hold back his laugh, "We both should stop, or we will be beaten up by them."

Elena looked back at the chefs as if they did hold back their indignance.

She did not know that the chefs were suffocated by their flirting.

After the two of them had a wonderful meal, they were ready to fly home immediately and finish the project.

However, Elena helplessly found that they both ate too much, and it must not be comfortable when they got on the plane.

After some deliberation, she finally decided to spend one more day in New Zealand before going back.

When they were hanging around, two uninvited guests came to the door of Elena's villa.

Caroline Collin was asking Alston, "Kid, how exactly did you offend Elena? I know she is good to you. How can she leave you all of sudden? You must have done something."

Alston frowned and massaged his temple, "Mom, I really didn't do anything. I broke up with Lizzy and Elena said no to my proposal."

"You proposed?" Caroline Collin was astonished, "You figured it out this time?"

Seeing Alston nod, Caroline instead doubted, "This can't be. You are so stubborn. Are you actually willing to change your mind?"

Alston couldn't say he was reborn and explained to his mom what happened in his last life. All he could do was stand there questioning himself.