

Chapter 41 Can only say goodbye

"Alston, how can you do this? This is not fair to Elena. How can you propose to Elena just after you broke up with Elizabeth Taylor?" Caroline simply thought she taught him better than this.

Alston didn't feel there was anything wrong with what he did, "But doesn't Elena love me? What's wrong with me proposing to her directly?"

Deep in his heart, he felt that the way Elena kept refusing him was more or less a bit unappreciative.

But when he remembered that Elena wished she had nothing to do with him, he was panicked.

On one hand, he felt that she was just giving him a hard time, and on the other hand, he felt that she really wanted to stay away from him.

Caroline stomped her feet in anger, "This way, who would think that you really wanted to marry her? You couldn't have Elizabeth Taylor, and you were frustrated so you come to Elena. She, of course, knew you are not sincere, then why would she agree to marry you!"

Alston subconsciously wanted to retort, but he opened his mouth and didn't know what to say, as if everything was not what he thought it was.

Why would his own mother think he was wrong? He had broken up with Lizzy and proposed to the woman who had been chasing him, was this not a very natural thing?

Seeing his son's face, Caroline knew that he had not listened to her at all, so she did not say more, but seriously began to think about how to keep Elena.

They kept coming over to the company to see her for the past two days, and the receptionist said that Elena had gone on a business trip, and the return date was not set.

They didn't want to give up, so they had to keep waiting.

So, When Elena and Joey were back from their business trip and carried the presents they had bought for others, they met Caroline and Alston on a narrow path.

Elena was speechless. She didn't expect Alston to bring his mother all the way here.

She can ignore Alston, but Caroline is different. She has always favored her, so she has no way to refuse.

Caroline pulled Elena's hand and didn't let go. Elena had no choice but to indicate Joey to take things up to the company first, while she, herself, would deal with these two people.

Caroline pulled Elena into a hug and said happily, "Elena, it's been a long time, did you miss me?"

Elena nodded, "Yes, it is a long time, and I'm relieved to see that you are healthy, auntie."

Caroline smiled from her heart, "I was quite lonely, so I came back."

As she spoke, she looked around and said, "Is it convenient for you if we find a place to sit and talk?"

"Yes." After that, Elena led the two to a French restaurant.

After ordering, Elena cut to the chase, "Auntie, just tell me what you want to say!"

Caroline sighed, "Alas, Elena, I watched you two grow up, and now you are both adults. Time does fly! But auntie wants to ask, what happened to you and Alston? Now you two don't even say hello to each other."

Elena tilted her head and said with certainty, "Auntie, I actually wanted to apologize to you, I really shouldn't have disturbed you and Alston for so long before."

Not waiting for Caroline to answer, Elena continued, "Alston never loved me, and you know that. But I badgered him again and again, so he paid attention to me, but I have now figured out that this is not good for either of us."

"So, I let him go. Alston will meet his true love. Strictly speaking, he and I have not even been together, not even as a couple, so it is not even a break-up."
