

Chapter 44 Something weird

It must be that the God couldn't even stand him anymore, and then threw him here so that he could and wake up, Alston thought.

Suddenly, there was a knock on the car window, and he lowered it to see a woman outside.

"Julia Green? We already have nothing to do with each other. What are you still doing here?" Alston said coldly.

Julia looked at him pitifully from outside the car, "Alston, I'm pregnant."

At this moment, an intimidating light flashed in Alston's eyes, but he quickly narrowed his eyes and opened the car door.

"Come up here. Didn't you say you took your pill then?" His voice was low and husky.

Julia had a burst of excitement under her eyes as she got into the car, "I did take it, but it just didn't work for some reason."

Alston nodded, and drove towards the hospital.

On the way, he said to Julia Green, "Keep the baby. I know what you want. I can give it to you."

Julia's eyes flickered for a moment, "Alston, I really like you. It's just that before you had Elizabeth Taylor and Elena around, there was absolutely no place for me."

Alston mockingly hooked his lips and quietly watched Julia's performance without making any comments.

In the end, what he needs now is just a child, and it doesn't matter who is the mother.

He found that since he understood that it was no longer possible with him and Elena, his feelings had become indifferent and completely dispensable.

Except when he sees Elena, he will have a strong feeling, but it is too late.

.....

Time passes quickly, and in the blink of an eye, Joey has graduated three years ago. These years, he has been in Elena's company, from interns to junior staff, to project managers, and then to the general manager.

The promotion cannot be said to be slow, but no one will gossip about him, because all the results of his efforts can be seen by everyone.

At Elena's company, the first examination is the character, so people never pull the ranks or pick on others.

In this place, there is a warm working atmosphere, where everyone almost treats it as a second home.

The company's afternoon tea break is even more popular. Their office has now successfully expanded from the previous two floors into the current building.

The staff retention rate is even higher, so that several bosses have come to learn from her experience.

Elena never said much about anything. It's actually quite simple: a simple work environment, and a substantial income, that's all.

This day, Elena had just come back from a business trip, and felt that the atmosphere of the company was so a little bit weird.

These employees were secretly stealing glances at her. Elena wondered, was it her makeup? Or she was not properly dressed?

Thinking about it, she felt strange. She clearly looked at herself before entering the door and adjusted her clothes to ensure that she was fine before entering the company.

After all, if she has a slight headache, she will certainly attract people's concern, for which she is touched.

Elena walked suspiciously to her office door, and at this moment, even her senior secretary stole a glance at her, and the feeling that something was wrong became even clearer.