

Chapter 5 Congratulations

Alston Rivers heard this answer and suddenly laughed.

It was an exasperated laugh.

This woman was brazen to this extent.

She cheated and got pregnant with someone else's child.

And she appeared so righteous.

"Elena Forbes, I thought you were just greedy and vain, I didn't think... you were still cheap!"

But then suddenly Alston Rivers realized something.

"Your real purpose is divorce, right? You said that you want to bring me and Lizzy together, but in fact, you can't hide your pregnancy, and you're afraid that when the time comes, you'll be disgraced!"

Elena sat up from the bed.

Her stunning face was covered with frost, without the slightest hint of blood.

She didn't try to argue.

Because whatever she said, he wouldn't believe it.

Instead, she took a document out of her bag.

She handed it to Alston.

He wrinkled his brows and asked, "What is this?"

"Divorce papers."

She spat out the words clearly.

Alston Rivers clenched his fists.

"I'm surprised you're so impatient."

Elena did not deny it. Although her heart was dripping blood painfully, her face was still even.

This look made Alston Rivers even more furious.

"Before you and I got married, our respective properties were notarized, yours is still yours, and as for what my parents gave us as a wedding gift, I didn't want it either, all yours."

After saying this, she breathed a sigh of relief and all the gloom on her face turned into a smile.

"Congratulations, you are finally free."

"Obviously I should congratulate you, right? Miss. Forbes is back to being single and happy with her new love." He bared his teeth.

Her eyelids lowered, not daring to look at him.

"All the best wishes to you and Elizabeth Taylor."

She gave her blessing.

Alston Rivers did not notice the bitterness in the words.

However, he bit her lips in a fury.

"That man, did he do the same to you?"

Elena was startled.

Tears fell.

"Alston..." she called out softly.

She loved him.

How could there be another man?

Alston's initiative to kiss her gave her courage.

Elena Forbes stretched out her hand and hugged him, attempting to get closer to him.

She asked with expectation, "Alston, do you not want to divorce, either?"

Alston Rivers froze.

She continued to pursue the question with expectation, "If so, then we won't get divorced, OK?"

It would break her heart to leave him.

She hugged him even tighter and kissed him, "Alston, I love you."

The man was overwhelmed and didn't know how to react.

As the kiss deepened.

He pushed her away with all his strength.

"Elena Forbes, you really make me sick." After being with another man, how dare she still have the face to claim she loved him?

Elena Forbes looked at him with fascination, tears sparkling in her beautiful eyes.

He also wanted to say she was shameless.

But she looked so pitiful that he couldn't open his mouth again.

Not to mention they were getting divorced.

She had nothing to do with him anymore!

He gritted his teeth, "Don't show up in front of me ever again. Lizzy doesn't like it."

That kiss was only a reaction when a man thought he was a "cuckold".

He never loved her.

All these years, he only loved Elizabeth Taylor.

Elena's eyes, once again, dimmed.

When she got up again, she no longer had the slightest intention to stay and left the ward.

Alston Rivers looked at the woman's lonely back. His face stiffened and froze.

The hand that held the divorce papers was trembling.

He should stay away from her.

But why did he feel so disturbed?