

Chapter 26 Were you worthy of my heart?

Soon Alston ran out of topics. Elena was pulled away by her partner, while he found a corner, and filled himself up with wine, one after another.

Elena was a little worried, but she laughed at herself when she saw Julia Green come to him.

After all, he never lacks confidants, and he never needs her.

After they hammered out their cooperation details, Elena was ready to go back, when a waiter handed her a small note, which said room 309.

She originally did not want to go at all, but she was afraid something bad would happen, so she decided to go.

After going up to the third floor, someone immediately welcomed her into 309, and there were quite a few people inside.

There was even one unexpected person, Joey. He was drugged, eyes bleary.

And the culprit was staring at her with an evil leer.

Elena looked at James Channing without moving, "James Channing, you really lack creativity. What do you want? Hurry up and say it. I'm busy."

James pulled Joey by his side, smiling weirdly, "Miss. Forbes, there is no need to hurry. I just want to cooperate with you, but you have always been a myth. I can only start from other places."

Elena tilted her head and pointed to Joey, "The so-called other places?"

James lit a cigarette, "Don't worry, he is yours. We didn't do anything outrageous!"

Elena sighed. She is not someone who likes to be threatened, but Joey has a pretty face and she likes it!

Thus, the two reached a pleasant discussion on the next step of cooperation.

Finally, Elena carried Joey down the stairs, in fact, she is quite strong, but there has been little opportunity to show it.

But this guy's hands were hanging around her neck, yet refused to stay still, so she just wanted to throw him away.

But truth to be told, she was trying to figure out a way to trap Joey by her side and keep her mind at ease. James Channing straightforwardly sent him to her, which made her more or less embarrassed.

So, she was going to give something that would be popular in the future to James Channing!

Elena smoothly carried him to the car, and unexpectedly felt a very unpleasant sight.

She turned her head to look. It was Alston who was obviously drunk, while Julia Green was accompanying him, occasionally glaring at her.

Elena looked at Joey at her side and looked at Julia Green over her shoulder.

She didn't say anything, but waved to Alston, and then got into the car.

The driver had just started the car when there was a knock on the window.

Elena speechlessly lowered the car window, "Alston, we broke up. You go your way, and I'll go mine. Stop harassing me, okay?"

Alston reached out and grabbed her wrist, "Elena, I know you are mad at me. You go back with me, okay? What's so great about him? He is not worthy of your favor!"

Elena asked back, "What about you? What's good about you? Were you worthy of my heart?"