

Chapter 35 Dealing with Gossip

Elena did not know that her information caused such interesting consequences. She was still busy with work at this time..

In this case, the most carefree person was her. After all, she was just a bystander.

In fact, today was also the first day that Joey prepared her food, and the first day he officially joined her New Energy company.

This was a day to celebrate, Elena thought. She booked a banquet in advance, planning to take everyone out for fun after work.

Joey was now busy helping everyone print things, starting from the most basic things. He thought this work opportunity was incredible.

But since he came, and the job was related to his major, then he would do it all along . And by the way, he trusted Elena's ability deeply and believed he could certainly broad his horizon following her.

Joey's intuition told him that Elena could bring him a change, and the change was never something simple. Of course, all this had a prerequisite, and that was to ensure that Elena always had interest in him.

Frankly speaking, he was a little apprehensive, and didn't know how to keep her interested. And all the initiatives were in the hands of Elena.

While he was thinking, Elena's secretary Windy called out to him, "Joey, Miss. Forbes wants to see you."

Joey responded while walking towards Elena's office, "Miss. Forbes, is there something wrong?"

Elena handed a pile of materials to him, "Give you two days to finish reading these things. Next week you go with me to New Zealand. We have a project there."

Joey was surprised, "But Miss. Forbes, I am a freshman here."

"So what?" Elena didn't take this seriously at all. She knew Joey's ability, so naturally, she wasn't afraid of her employees gossiping. Anyway, in the end, they would all be slapped in the face by reality.

Joey thought he did not have much choice, feeling a little aggrieved, and said, "But Miss. Forbes, don't you worry about your reputation?"

Elena laughed lightly, "Do you worry about your reputation?"

The meaning in her tone was obvious. They would call people like him gigolo. Joey's face blanched, "In fact, I got the job by myself. I passed the interview."

"I know." Elena said in a cold voice, "Joey, during work, I don't talk about feelings. You should know that. What you face in the future are our customers, not the so-called gossip."

"Dealing with gossip is very simple. Smash those things with real competence. You should know that no one's perception is unchangeable. As long as you have the ability, they are at your disposal." Elena felt she was nagging.

When she was with Alston, he didn't even have the privilege to let Elena teach him.

Well, with Alston's character, no matter what she says, he will not believe it. He'll only think she is planning some tricks, ready to do something bad against him.

She has long been used to it.

In fact, this time, Alston's reaction actually surprised her, as if this was the first time he believed her, for the matter of his ex-girlfriend, Elizabeth.

It feels so ironic to think about it. Why are there such strange people? Well, she should say, why are people so strange?

Why is human nature so puzzling?

Despite what she just said to Joey, she knew she still hadn't achieved that absolute power, otherwise, things between her and Alston wouldn't have ended up that way.

What Elena wanted to do most now was just to run her company well, and then casually have a fling to spice up her life a little.

As for Alston, she had no hope for him, although occasionally she would subconsciously think about him. When she calmed down, she would find that they hadn't seen each other for so long!

Elena shook her head in amusement. She was still too young, and could not really do anything without showing it on her face. Now, she had to let someone watch her change her face.

And Joey was stunned by Elena's words, seriously thought it over, and finally felt that there was nothing wrong with what she said, but who could reach that level?

At least it must be a person who had a say in things, but he was just a college student.

Joey sighed. Why was he not as capable as Elena?

But at this moment, he was relieved a lot. They could gossip all they want, but he wouldn't physically get hurt, at most be looked down on.

The reality is, he's been looked down on the whole time. Since the death of his parents, since going to the orphanage, all of this has given him a sense of unreality.

He can no longer remember what it was like to be a child, just that there was a time when it was really dark, and he struggled hard to climb out but there was no way out.

He was trapped for a third of his life. Sometimes he would have nightmares.

He has never forced himself to do anything, but college is one exception. For so many years, he worked so hard just for getting out of that hole.

Now here comes the opportunity, if he doesn't take this seriously, then it is him who doesn't know chalk from cheese.

Thinking about it, Joey felt that he had hit the jackpot. He was confident in himself.

At this moment, Joey's heart went back to its chest, "Miss. Forbes, I won't let you down. You just wait and see."

Hearing this from him, she smiled from the bottom of her heart, "I know I haven't convinced you, after all, I haven't even convinced myself. It's just that your answer tells me that we can move forward together, and that's the best part."

Joey nodded, although he inwardly felt that Elena looked down on herself too much, her words still made him very happy.

"Then, Miss. Forbes, I'll go now." Joey said.
