

Chapter 29

“Uhm...”

Andrius snuck a gaze at Noir. He then said loudly, “Captain, I have been here the entire morning.”

“Yes, yes, captain. He’s been here the entire morning,” Noir echoed.

“Andy came here to have a chat with me, and we’ve been talking since this morning.”

“Are you sure?”

“I am.” Noir nodded.

Noelle pondered deeply.

While the Dragon Gang was being annihilated at the bar, she was there, but she had been unconscious.

Right before she passed out, she saw someone that resembled Andrius coming in. That was why she came to Andrius as soon as she recovered.

However, she did not have enough evidence to prove it was him.

“You’d better not cross the line or commit a crime. If not, not even Marcus Freely can save you,” Noelle warned Andrius before she got into her cruiser and left.

Noir sighed. “Marcus’ daughter is really fearless. Why is she poking her nose into this?”

“As long as she’s happy.” Andrius helplessly continued, “Three months later, we’ll be out of Sumeria and return to the Western Frontline.”

“Haha. Women are much more difficult to deal with than enemies.”

Andrius stayed in the workshop until the evening before he went back home.

When he arrived at the entrance of the mansion, he heard Luna’s displeased voice, “Tell him to stop dreaming! New Moon Corporation is not some toy he can play with!”

As soon as Andrius entered the room, Luna hung up the phone.

She looked at him with a gloomy expression. “Where have you been this afternoon?”

“I saw you went out with Athena, and there was nothing to do in the office, so I went out for a walk,” Andrius said.

“You are not allowed to skip work even if you have nothing to do! I’ll deduct your salary! If you go absent again, I’ll deduct double!”

Luna then stormed upstairs.

Andrius was baffled by her hot temper. He looked at Athena and asked, “What’s wrong with her?”

“New Moon Corporation is getting ready to launch the Valiant Institute project, and Ms. Crestfall is collecting funds for it. She went to Northern Point to close projects and collect funds, but the person in charge there threatened her and requested that she sleep with him before paying, or else the collection of funds would be delayed indefinitely.”

Andrius stayed quiet.

Disdain was visible in Athena’s eyes, as though she was asking why Andrius did not react when his woman was being teased by another man.

Little did she know that Andrius captured every detail.

After dinner, he came up with an excuse and went out before calling Noir.

“What’s up, Andy?” Noir answered almost instantly.

“Get me a tractor. We’re going to Northern Point,” he said.

“A tractor?” Noir was relaxing on the bamboo tatami when he got the call. He sat up immediately and asked, “Why do you need a tractor?”

“To level something. The person in charge of the Northern Point’s project gave Luna a hard time, so I want to get a tractor to level the place as a lesson for him.”

“I’m on it.”

Noir hung up the phone and went to find a tractor.
