After Reborn I Become a Billionaire novel Chapter 2: I Want to Cancel the Marriage!

Susan stared at Harrison in a daze.

She did not understand what exactly had gone wrong.

Just then in the car, a specific phone ringtone suddenly rang.

The phone continued to ring for a long while.

Susan could not endure it anymore and she reminded, "Harrison, your phone's ringing."

She wanted to see how Harrison would explain to Charles.

Harrison had to try her best to control herself to speak calmly to him.
"Charles."

"Harrison, sorry, I'm busy today and I can't take you home from the hospital. I'm sorry." Charles's gentle voice was heard.

Harrison let out a sarcastic smile.

Charles was going to participate in a selection of "Outstanding and Influential Youths" a few days later; therefore she had specially gone to the temple to pray for his success.

The preposterous thing was that, to some extent, she met with the car accident due to Charles, while this man didn't give a shit about her.

She had used to make him her priority for everything.

She could stand at the top, yet she had given up everything for him!

"Harrison?" Without receiving her reply, Charles asked more gently.

"I'm fine," Harrison replied blandly and continued, "I whispered a prayer for your success."

“Didn’t you pray for our happy married life, and having a lot of kids?” he joked.

She did. She used to be an innocent girl for whom love is all before the accident.

Yet when she thought about that prayer, she felt utmost disgusted.

She only knew the moment she died that the reason she was not pregnant for ten years was because Charles had been adulterating her food with contraceptive pills.

Ironically, she had suffered the Sawyer family’s infinite contempt and humiliation because of that.

She had never stopped going to the hospital for treatment for this, and ever thought about conceiving a test tube baby.

“Why, are you tired?” Charles seemed to have sensed her abnormality and he quickly asked with care.

“I’ve gone to the hill with Susan in the early morning and I do feel a little tired. I’m on my way home now.”

“I’m sorry that I can’t accompany you today because of work.” He sounded regretful.

Harrison felt that she was just wasting her energy when she let out a grim smile.

She used to be so naive to think that he really was busy with work back then.

However, it turned out that he was just busy sleeping with other women.

“Be careful on the road.” Charles reminded her.

Harrison hung up the call straight away.

Seeing Harrison’s cold expression, Susan swallowed her words.

She felt that Harrison had changed.

She looked like a complete stranger to her.

Maybe she would become normal the next day after having a goodnight sleep.

They returned to the urban district and Harrison dropped Susan at the Phillips Manor.

“Susan.” Harrison suddenly called her.

Susan turned back and said, “Harrison, you should go home and get a good rest. Don’t overthink it! ”

Susan was still that optimistic and innocent girl.

She was grateful that those disasters had not landed on Susan. And a smile lifted the corners of Harrison’s mouth.

That was the first sincere smile of her since she was reborn.

““Luckily, you’re still alive.” said Harrison.

“You’ve really gone nuts!” Susan was almost speechless, “My dad said a jinx like me would live for thousand years, so a small car accident can’t take my life away!”

Harrison once thought too, that Susan who was innocent and romantic, living a reckless and carefree life would not die that easily. It was impossible for her to commit suicide. Yet Susan had jumped from the 28th floor.

That was the trauma that haunted Harrison and the pain rooted in her heart forever.

She was glad.

She had returned to the present once again, and everything was just perfect.

It was perfect that nothing had happened, and she could take vengeance at any time!

She calmed herself down and said, “Don’t tell anyone about what happened today.”

“What?”

“The promise with Oscar.”

Susan rolled her eyes, "I won't, you'll get normal tomorrow anyway."

She would only get more determined the next day.

"I'm leaving."

"Mind your safety on the road," Susan said with worry.

Harrison nodded and drove steadily all the way back home.

She returned to the Cooper Manor, the place which was her home ten years ago.

She felt familiar and strange with it at the same time.

She was flooded with emotions.

If it was not because she was cheated by that man in her previous life, her parents would not die in a car accident. She was protected by her parents with their flesh under that planned accident, and because of that, she was lucky to survive.

She no longer wanted to recall, and would never experience those bloody scenes and tragic calamities anymore!

"Harrison, did Susan pick you up from the hospital? And she?" Harrison's mother, Michelle West, greeted her gently.

Harrison held back her tears and let out a smile, walking towards them.

Everything would change from now onwards.

She would be the one to torture Charles and destroy the Sawyer Group. No one could lay a single finger on her family again!

"Why are your eyes red?" Michelle asked with worry as Harrison approached her.

"I took her back home first. My eyes were a bit dry, so I rubbed them."

"The Sawyers called just now. They want to talk about your wedding with us..." Michelle said.

Harrison took a deep breath and said, "Mom, I want to cancel the marriage."

"Huh?" Michelle was filled with surprise.

Harrison's father, Martha Cooper who was sitting beside Michelle looked up from his newspaper. "Did you fight with Charles?"

"Charles is not a good guy. The reason he marries me is just to seize our family property, and use our family as his stepping stone to enhance his family." Harrison could clearly sense that her parents did not believe her, she then continued, "I don't have any evidence to prove what I said is true now, but please give me some time, I'll convince you!"

Martha and Michelle fell into silence when they saw their own daughter being that assertive so suddenly.

Harrison was not a child that would make them worry since little.

Her grandfather had arranged the marriage for her since she was a child. Harrison did not reject, and she used to be reluctant to come into contact with other male friends except Charles. She had had her heart all set on Charles.

Not to mention they had had good relationships since young. Why did she suddenly say that?

Harrison could see their confusion. "Dad, I've never done anything that caused you trouble. I understand how many benefits the marriage would bring to us, but even so, I still want to stick to my decision."

"You're my daughter, I certainly believe you." Martha could only concede when he saw her being that assertive. "It's just that, if we cancel the marriage now, let's not say it wouldn't bring us benefits, it would bring our family extremely negative impacts. How would the Cooper Group be able to have a foothold in Kensbury City in the following days?" He was puzzled.

He still sounded a little frustrated.

"It won't happen." Harrison said firmly, "After canceling the marriage, it would be the Sawyer family who face all the consequences!"

Martha was slightly shocked.

He was impressed by his daughter's strong aura.

He felt that she was not the usually gentle and docile her anymore.

“We’ll see, it’s the Sawyer family getting embarrassed during the wedding next month!” she said emphatically.
