

Meanwhile, at the River Helm mansion, Suletta rushed into the living room with a delighted look on her face." Grandfather, I just got something huge!"

Anthony looked at her gently and asked, "What is it that has made you so happy?"

"Grandfather, you told me to deal with Andrius Moonshade's matter, right? So, I've been tailing him, and guess what I just found out?"

Suletta continued, "I found out that Andrius just offended Randal Hanshu! Randal Hanshu was admitted to the hospital, and he has contacted his family's assassin team to move out tomorrow morning to destroy the Crestfalls!"

Anthony's cloudy old eyes glinted.

He knew that Andrius was Luna's husband, and if the Hanshus were after the Crestfalls, given the difference in power, the Crestfalls would not be able to fight back.

If he was able to lend a helping hand to the Crestfalls during their most desperate time, then he would be able to repay his debt to Andrius.

It was a great opportunity!

"Suletta, tell the men to get prepared."

Anthony relaxed his brows and smiled as if he had everything planned out. "Tomorrow morning, lead our men to help the Crestfalls to overcome this crisis."

"I understand, Grandfather. I'll go make the necessary arrangements."

Suletta shared the same thoughts with her grandfather when she got the news.

The next morning, Andrius got the news as well and he quickly headed to the Crestfalls' mansion. After all, he started it, and Master Crestfall was there, thus he could not just ignore it.

The atmosphere at Dream's Waterfront was tense.

Master Crestfall was sitting in the main seat. Behind him were Harry, Dick, and George.

The young ones, like Luna and her peers, were also inside the house.

Every one of them looked terrible. They would glance at Luna from time to time grudgingly, filled with the intention of blaming her for what happened.

Luna looked guilty as well, but she dared not lift her face.

Earlier in the morning, they had received a warning from the Hanshus.

The Hanshus would come to their place to deal with the matter, and if the Crestfalls ran, they would hunt them down, killing every single one of them. This was all because of Luna, or more precisely, Luna's husband, Andrius.

Finally, someone snapped, "Luna, if you know your husband is an idiot, why can't you keep an eye on him? Now he's causing huge trouble for us, and we are all going down because of him. Are you happy now?"

The one who spoke was Luna's uncle, Dick.

After that, everyone else echoed in agreement.

"Luna, you are a sinner! A sinner who has dragged the family down!"

"You started this, and your stupid husband! You've dragged us all down!"

"Damn you, Luna. Damn you, Andrius."

The brothers, Harry, George, and Dick, and their respective families, never saw eye to eye.

With this incident upon them, they all vented their anger on Luna and Andrius.

They did not want to overcome the crisis together as a family. Instead, they were considering turning Andrius and Luna in just to save their own skin.
