When His Eyes Opened

Chapter 2501

"If you have money, you can kill other people's pets at will, and you can trample on other people's dignity at will…That's great."
Lucas clenched his fists tightly.
"Young Master, you have to be patient! What you have to do now is to go to school well. After you graduate from university, you can move out from here. In the future, Mrs. Hogan will not be able to bully you." Siena said, clearing up the table clean.
"Is this your plan? After you graduate from university, you don't have to go to Hogan's house anymore." Lucas watched her take out the trash bag from the trash can, and quickly replaced it with a new one.
"Yes! After I earn enough tuition fees, I can go to the society to find a job after graduation." Siena fantasized about the future, and the corners of her mouth couldn't help but curl up,
"Life in the future will definitely be better than now."
Looking at her and thinking of her being helpless now, Lucas's throat tightened suddenly: "Did your parents both die in that fire?

You are not yet 18 years old, and your family members have passed away. The government provides subsidies for people like you. You don't need to work to earn tuition fees."

Seeing that Siena was silent, Lucas reminded her.

"Young Master, I'm not from Thopiavelle, so I can't receive benefits from Thopiavelle." Siena accepted his kindness, "Thank you for reminding me, but I'm not tired from working in the Hogan family, and I'll be 18 soon. I can support myself."

Siena put her schoolbag on her back and picked up the garbage bag.

"Young Master, I put the pork ribs rice in the refrigerator. If you are hungry during the day, heat it in the microwave. I will come to deliver the rice tomorrow night." Siena walked to the door with the garbage.

Opening the door, Siena poked her head out and glanced at the main building.

The door to the main building was closed and she could go.

"Is it raining?" Lucas heard the sound of rain, so he walked to the door and glanced outside.

"Yeah. It's not raining too much." Siena poked her head out just now, and knew it was raining, "I'll run back, and I'll be home soon."

Lucas frowned, watching her thin figure slip into the rainy night.

It really was a poor wretch that no one cared about and no one loved!

She didn't know how to find an umbrella when it rained.

Siena ran back to the rented house with her schoolbag in her arms, her coat was soaked, but fortunately the books in her schoolbag were not wet.

After she put down her schoolbag, she immediately took off her wet coat, and then went to the cabinet to find clean clothes.

When it was raining outside, she didn't feel how cold it was, because she had to run non-stop. she got home now, and after calming down, she couldn't help shivering from the cold.

The house she rented was a dilapidated old house with no air-conditioning or heating. When the wind blew in winter, the cold wind would come in through the windows.

In fact, the window was not broken, but the quality was relatively poor, and the sealing was also poor. And the rent was also cheap.

The landlord collected the rent once a year, and had never raised the rent in those years.

The mother-in-law was seriously ill before, and the homeowner didn't drive them out after knowing about it.

She was grateful to the landlord from the bottom of her heart.

She entered the bathroom, closed the door, and looked at her face in the mirror, her eyes suddenly became quiet. Because she cried tonight and got rained outside again, the scar props stuck to her face were not so tight.

She actually had an umbrella, but she accidentally lost it when she was doing funeral affairs for her mother-in-law.

Thinking of her mother-in-law, thinking of the lost umbrella, her eyes became sore again.

She took a deep breath and gently tore off the scar on her face.
