Chapter 771

Comelia was all nods, "Sure, I won't see Granny, I'll cooperate with the doctor, whatever you need me to do, I'll do it."

The doctor glanced at Marcus, took his cue, and said. "There's nothing specific you need to do right now, just eat well, rest well, and when Granny Rebecca wakes up tomorrow, you'll have the energy to be with her."

As long as Granny was okay, whatever the doctor said, Cornelia would respond, "Okay..."

Marcus said, "I'll have Ayden take you and Bri home to rest, I'll stay with Granny"

Comelia shook her head, "There's no way I'm leaving Granny at this time, I want to be by her side. The moment she wakes up, I'm sure I'm the first person she'll want to see."

Marcus understood her feelings. She wouldn't be able to rest if she went home at this point.

"Alright. Then I'll have Bri go back with Granny to rest, and we'll stay here."

Comelia said, "My Granny is sick, your Granny must feel guilty and worried. I'll go talk to her first, so she can rest easy. I'm afraid she might get sick from worrying too much."

Comelia guessed right. Granny Luisa was indeed feeling guilty. When Granny Luisa heard that her friend was out of danger, she was moved to tears, "Thank God, Rebecca finally woke up."

Briana worriedly said, "Granny, you can't get too excited. Just because Granny Rebecca is okay, doesn't mean you should get sick."

Granny Luisa asked, "Where's Cornelia? I haven't seen her in a while. Is she avoiding me because I didn't take good care of her Granny?"*

“Granny, Just then, Cornelia came into the room and hugged Granny Luisa, “I stepped out for a bit and was discussing things with Marc, so I couldn’t keep you company. Granny, everyone sees how good you’ve been to me and my Granny. Her sickness has nothing to do with you.”

Granny Luisa held onto Comelia’s hand tightly, “Nelly, it’s my fault. If I hadn’t let those bad people into the house, your Granny wouldn’t have heard those harsh words and wouldn’t have fainted. Nelly, I’m sorry!”

“Granny, it’s really not your fault. You should stop blaming yourself.” Cornelia couldn’t persuade Granny Luisa, she looked back at Marcus, signaling him to try.

Marcus came over, “Granny, Comelia is right. They both know how good you’ve been to them. This has nothing to do with you. Please don’t blame yourself. You’ve been tired all day, I’ll have Bri take you home to rest.”

Granny Luisa didn’t want to leave at this time either, “No, I want to wait in the hospital for Rebecca to wake up. I’m not going anywhere until she wakes up.”

Everyone wanted to stay, so Marcus had to compromise, “Okay, I’ll arrange for some rest rooms. If you’re tired, go rest a bit.”

Granny Rebecca woke up around four in the morning, and the doctors were immediately notified.

A group of medical experts first checked her basic condition, then reported to Marcus, “President Hartley……

Marcus quickly made a keep quiet gesture.

Cornelia didn’t want to rest, insisting on staying outside Granny’s ward, and she had just fallen asleep in Marcus’ arms from exhaustion. To not wake her, Marcus gently covered her ears, then signaled the doctor to lower his voice.

The doctor lowered his voice, “Granny Rebecca knows you’re here with her, and she said she wants to talk to you.”

Marcus said, “Okay, I’ll go right away”

Marcus was planning to carry Cornelia back to the rest room first, then go see Granny Rebecca. However, as soon as he moved, Cornelia, who wasn't sleeping very deeply, woke up.

Chapter 772

She blinked her sleepy eyes and rubbed her groggy head, momentarily forgetting where she was. It wasn't until she lifted her head and saw Marcus clearly that she recalled, "President Harley..."

Marcus, "Your grandma woke up and wants to talk to me alone. You take a break, I'll go see her."

"I'm her granddaughter, why is it that the first person she wants to see when she awakes isn't me? Doctor, are you getting things mixed up?" Her grandmother woke up, and the first person she wanted to see was not her. She was reluctant to believe this fact, but she said, "Whatever, I'm coming with you to see her."

Marcus could only oblige, "Alright."

Cornelia insisted on accompanying Marcus to her grandma's ward. She was taken aback by how much her grandma had aged overnight and how much weight she had lost.

"Grandma..." A lump formed in Cornelia's throat as she buried her head into her grandma's chest, "Grandma, do you feel any discomfort? Is there anything you want to eat? If you feel unwell, you must tell me. And if there's anything you want to eat, you must tell me too. I remember you love grilled pork belly, once you're better, I'll personally make it for you, okay?"

Before her grandma could respond, Cornelia had already babbled on.

Her grandma struggled to lift her hand and pat her head, "Nelly, don't worry, I'm fine."

This girl had always been like this since childhood, the more nervous she was, the more she talked. She used her constant chatter to mask her emotions.

Cornelia, "I know you'll be fine. I'm not worried."

"Good, good, you're not worried." Granny Luisa chuckled, "You go out first, I need to talk to Marc in private."

Cornelia, "Grandma, I'm your granddaughter. What do you have to say to him alone that I can't hear yet?"

Granny Rebecca, "Many, many things that you can't hear."

Cornelia, "No, I want to."

Cornelia was not an unreasonable child. She'd been sensible since she was little. She was being disobedient today, refusing to leave, because she was still worried and scared. She was afraid that once she left, she would miss important news. She was afraid that her grandma was hiding something from her, afraid that her grandma was unwilling to tell her the truth.

Granny Rebecca smiled, "You're married now, your husband is here, and you're still acting like a child. Aren't you afraid he'll laugh at you?"

Cornelia, "He won't."

"Nelly..." Granny Rebecca called Cornelia's name and stroked her face again, "Grandma doesn't have any big wishes now, just hoping you and Marc can have a baby soon."

Cornelia, "Grandma, don't rush, we'll have a baby eventually."

Or perhaps they won't. After all, Marcus had health issues and it was uncertain whether he can be treated in the future. But Cornelia can't say this.

They were still young, not in a hurry, but Granny Rebecca was. Her health was deteriorating, and after this sudden fainting spell, she thought she may not live to see their child. If she can't see their child, there were some things she must say now. If she didn't say them now, she may never get the chance.

Chapter 773

Granny Rebecca spoke again, "As for the thing about you two having kids, I, as an elder, should not intervene. You guys should decide it yourselves. Now, Nelly, you step outside first, I need to have a chat with Marc."

Cornelia clung tightly to her granny's arm, her rosy face pressed against her, said with full affection, "Granny, I'm the link between you two. You wouldn't show me away, right?"

Usually, whenever Cornelia played coy, Granny Rebecca would always cave, but this time she was unusually adamant, stating that Cornelia should not listen, and she meant it.

Seeing the two refusing to back down, Marcus stepped in to mediate, "Cornelia, I think we should respect Granny's wishes..."

Before he could finish, the usually obedient Cornelia lifted her head, glaring at him angrily, "Of course you want me to respect Granny's decision. She wants to keep you. If Granny wanted to keep me and had you leave, you'd start singing a different tune."

Marcus was speechless.

Just a short while ago, he had complimented her for being understanding; he didn't expect her to become unreasonable so quickly.

Women's minds were truly hard to fathom.

Granny Rebecca, "Nelly, don't vent your frustration on Marc."

“Granny, you’re playing favorites! Now that you have Marcus, you don’t love me anymore!” Cornelia stormed out of the room, planning to eavesdrop from the door.

However, Granny Rebecca was well aware of her shenanigans, “Cornelia, close the door, then stand by the window where I can see you.” Not even letting her eavesdrop, what on earth did Granny want to talk to Marcus about?

Once she confirmed that Cornelia was obediently standing outside the window, Granny Rebecca let out a long sigh, then said, “Marc, have you heard about the photo incident?”

Marcus nodded, “Granny, you can rest assured. It will not affect Nelly and my marriage.”

Granny Rebecca only asked one question, but Marcus had already answered her biggest concern, “Will it really not affect your feelings for Nelly? You really don’t mind those photos? You really don’t care about what happened to Nelly in the past? You really don’t mind if Nelly’s reputation could influence you?”

Granny Rebecca repeated her questions with a heavy tone and a determined look. Only by doing so could she force Marcus to reveal his true feelings.

Cornelia was too important to her. She didn’t know how much longer she would live, so she wanted to pave the way for Cornelia in the last stage of her life.

If Marcus was not Cornelia’s true partner, she wouldn’t mind if they divorced, but she couldn’t let Cornelia take the risk.

Marcus solemnly said, “Granny, Nelly has never done anything wrong. The rumors, the hurt, she shouldn’t have to bear it.”

After hearing his words, Granny Rebecca’s eyes filled with tears as she looked at Marcus, “Do you know how people described Nelly after it happened?”

Marcus might not know the exact words people used, but he could imagine that they were extremely unfriendly towards Cornelia.

He had thought many times that, if he had met Cornelia earlier, he could have protected her and prevented her from being hurt.

Chapter 774

Granny Rebecca went on, "After that incident, I had Nelly keep going to school in Riverton, and that ticked off a lot of people who weren't even related to us.

"Once Nelly left, a bunch of folks showed up at our house, going on about how Nelly's reputation was ruined. They told me to find a man for Nelly to marry. They said there was no use for her to go to school anymore, no amount of learning would do her any good, and no man would want a woman with a bad reputation.

"They even introduced a man who was old, crippled, and abusive. His previous wife committed suicide because she couldn't stand his abuse. They even had the audacity to try to set Nelly up with this kind of man, saying he was willing to marry Nelly and that she should be grateful for his kindness.

"I was so mad that I kicked them all out of my house. They never dared to come and bother me again, but they started spreading more and more nasty rumors about Nelly.

"Some even threatened that either Nelly marries that man, or she'll never be able to get married. I never told Nelly about these words, I was afraid it would hurt her."

Just hearing about this, Marcus was already livid, he wished he could punish those people right there and then, "Granny, I promise, no one will talk about Nelly like that again."

Granny Rebecca asked, "How can you guarantee? There are too many gossip mongers in town. Last year when Nelly came home to take care of me, there were still people causing trouble for her. Some used the previous incident to slander her, to insult her."

Hearing this, Marcus felt ashamed, "Granny, I'm sorry!"

At that time. Nelly was already his wife. He should have been there for her, but he misunderstood her, and when she needed him the most, he wasn't there.

Granny Rebecca said, "You didn't know Nelly then, and there's nothing for you to apologize for! It's my fault that I wasn't able to protect her, that's why that incident happened. I could have stayed with Nelly during the holidays, but I didn't, I left her alone at home..."

Marcus replied, "Granny, it's not your fault. The ones to blame are those who framed Nelly, who slandered her. It's been so many years, and you shouldn't blame yourself anymore. You should forget the past with Nelly, and live each day of the future well."

Granny Rebecca's eyes welled up with tears again, "Nelly and I want to forget the past, but some people just won't let us. Why do people still bring up that incident after so many years? Why do they still bring out those photos? Do they want Nelly to die before they're satisfied?"

Hearing the word "die", Marcus felt a searing pain in his heart, "Granny, as long as I'm here, no one can hurt Nelly."

Granny Rebecca asked, "Marc, do you know who posted those photos?"

Marcus replied, "I've found out."

Granny Rebecca asked, "Who is it?"

Marcus replied, "It's Clair, the wife of Granger Reese from the Reese family in Riverton."

Hearing this name, Granny Rebecca was shocked, "Clair? You mean the person who posted Nelly's photos online is Clair?"

Marcus asked, "Granny, do you know her?"

Granny Rebecca paused for a moment and quickly denied, "No! I've only been in Riverton for a short while, how could I know her?"

Granny Rebecca looked a bit flustered, Marcus saw everything but didn't ask further, "No matter who she is, I will make her pay for everything she's done."

Hearing this, worry flashed across Granny Rebecca's eyes again, "Marc, about this..."

Chapter 775

Marcus said, "Granny, if you have something to say, you can just tell me."

Granny Rebecca asked, "How do you plan to deal with Clair?"

Marcus answered, "Granny, you seem to be taking quite an interest in this person."

Granny Rebecca said, "I once knew someone named Clair. Do you have a picture of this Clair? If you do, may I see it? I want to check if she's the one I knew."

"Wait a second. Marcus then shot a text to Leonardo Wilson: [Need a pic of Clair.]

It was past four in the morning. Leonardo was likely fast asleep and wouldn't see the WhatsApp message. Regardless, Marcus dialed him up without a second thought. However, a woman's voice answered the call.

The woman purred, "Who the hell is calling at this ungodly hour? Don't they know it's rude to call this late?"

Leonardo, who seemed to have just dozed off, was a bit groggy. Seeing the call came from Marcus, he snapped awake, "Marc, what's eating you calling me this late?"

Marcus said, "Send me a picture of Clair."

Leonardo exclaimed in surprise, "Holy cow! You called me this late just to ask for Clair's pic? Don't tell me you're falling for her?"

Marcus retorted, "You looking for a punch in the face?"

Leonardo laughed, "Alright, alright, I'm on it. I think someone posted her pic on Instagram today"

In no time, Leonardo found Clair's picture and sent it over to Marcus, "What do you need her pic for? She didn't piss off your Cornelia, did she?"

Marcus

was pleased with the way Leonardo referred to Cornelia, "You do know Cornelia's mine, right?"

Leonardo replied, "If Cornelia isn't yours, whose could she be? You must be thrilled having such a great assistant. Cornelia always has your back, won't let anyone badmouth you."

Any compliment about Cornelia would make Marcus happy. "When we've got some downtime, my wife and I will treat you to dinner"

Leonardo responded, "Really? You're finally willing to bring your wife out to meet us. I was beginning to think that your wife was too ugly for you to show her off."

Marcus said, "My wife is the most beautiful and adorable girl in the world."

Leonardo, "Wow, are these words actually coming out of your mouth? Are you sure you're not an impersonator?"

Please be a little restrained, you're not married yet. With that, Marcus hung up the call.*

Leonardo wanted to explain that he was just playing cards with a bunch of people, and they were just chilling on the couch because they were tired. It wasn't what Marcus assumed.

But Marcus didn't give him a chance to say anything.

After getting the picture, Marcus took a look. He didn't have any recollection of Clair, nor could he verify that the woman in the photo was her.

Chapter 776

He held his phone up to Granny Luisa, "Granny, Is this the Clair you know?"

Granny Rebecca took the phone and stared at the photo for a while, finally saying with relief. Thankfully, it's not the Clair I know. "thank god"

"Who is the Clair you know?" Marcus already had an answer in his mind, but he wanted to hear it from the old lady herself.

"An old friend." Granny Rebecca didn't want to talk about Clair any further and quickly steered the conversation back to the main topic, "Marc, I asked Nelly to leave because I need to talk to you about something personal, something Nelly shouldn't know about."

"Go ahead," Marcus said.

Granny Rebecca spoke, "Doctors keep saying I'm getting better, but I feel like I'm getting worse. I don't think I have much time left. Nelly was abandoned by her mother when she was young and then lost her father in a car accident. I'm all she has. If I suddenly leave her, I don't know how she'll handle it. Promise me you'll take care of her and spend time with her. Just be there for her. Don't let her do anything stupid."

Marcus assured her. The doctors aren't lying to you. You are getting better. The problem lies with the person who was taking care of you. She messed up your medication."

He didn't tell the old lady the truth out of concern that it might worry her too much and affect her recovery.

"Wrong medication?" Granny Rebecca questioned.

"Yes, I've kicked her out. We'll find someone else to take care of you from now on, Marcus continued. "And, I promise you, I'll take care of Nelly no matter what. She's my wife, and it's my duty to look after her."

"Is it just because she's your wife? Don't you like her even a bit?" the old lady asked.

Marcus was taken aback and then nodded, "Like her? Of course!"

She was such an amazing girl and she was his wife, how could he not like her !

Hearing this, the old lady finally felt relieved. With Marcus by Nelly's side, she didn't have to worry anymore, "Nelly is beautiful and lovely, she's perfect in every way. Anyone with the right mind will like her. Make sure you tell her that you like her. She's a bit sensitive, so make sure to reassure her often."

Marcus listened patiently and nodded, "Alright."

Granny Rebecca continued, "Please get her in now. I bet she's sulking outside because she can't hear our conversation."

"I'll get her now." Marcus went out and found Nelly, her eyes red-rimmed. Granny Rebecca was right, she had been crying.

He walked over and hugged her tightly, "Granny will be fine, don't worry too much."

Nelly wiped her swollen nose, "Promise me, if Granny tells you anything, you have to tell me."

Marcus patted her head gently and smiled, "Granny thinks she's not doing well, so she asked me to take good care of you."

Chapter 777

When Cornelia heard this, she felt like a ton of bricks had just hit her. "Man, I've really screwed up. Granny hinted at it so many times, and I just thought she was in a rush for us to have kids. I never considered that she was so desperate for us to have a baby because she was worried about leaving me alone and not being able to get by after she's gone."

Marcus said, "Better late than never, right? I'll give you a few days off. Spend some quality time with Granny"

Cornelia asked, "So, should I be thanking President Hartley?"

Marcus said, "Cut the crap, go to Granny."

"Alright." Cornelia turned to leave, took a couple of steps, then turned back and said, "Don't tell Granny about the poisoning, alright? She's old, she can't take the shock. I'm afraid it might scare her."

Marcus said, "Maybe she is tougher than you think."

Cornelia asked. "Did you tell her?"

Marcus asked, "Do you think I would do that?"

"Who knows?" After Cornelia finished speaking, she turned to leave, but Marcus pulled her back.

He looked at her, his face serious. "Cornelia, there's something I need to tell you."

She looked at him, her eyes sparkled "What is it?"

Marcus was silent for a few seconds, as if he had made a major decision, then slowly said, "I want to take care of you, not just because you're my wife."

Cornelia seemed to understand what he meant, but wasn't sure, so she wanted to confirm. "What do you mean?"

Marcus didn't say anything. "Go on, Granny is waiting for you."

"I'm not going anywhere until you finish your sentence." Cornelia hated it when people didn't finish their sentences; she insisted he made his point clear.

Marcus said. "I think... I might be into you"

She didn't expect him to say anything, let alone confess his feelings. Cornelia regretted pushing him. "Well, got it."

Then, she ran off.

He confessed, she just said "Well, got it, and then left him there.

Did she want him to like her or not?

When she bolted into Granny's ward, Cornelia's heart was still pounding

Granny Rebecca noticed her flushed face, and asked with concern, “Nelly, why are your eyes red and your face so flushed?”

Cornelia panicked, “The wind was strong and I got some sand in my eyes. I wasn’t crying”

Granny Rebecca chuckled, “You’re married now, but you’re still like a little girl, denying your tears.”

Cornelia sat next to Granny Rebecca, “Who says being married means I have to change?”

Granny Rebecca said, “True, as long as Nelly is happy, nothing else matters.”

Cornelia said, “Granny, it’s still early. Let me sleep with you for a while.”

Granny Rebecca said, “Okay”

With Granny’s permission, Cornelia climbed onto the bed, lay next to Granny, and held her tightly.

At that moment, as she smelled her grandmother’s scent, Cornelia’s anxious heart finally found tranquility. “Granny, I love you so, so much. I can’t live without you...”

She was terrified of not being able to hold Granny like this anymore, terrified of not hearing Granny’s voice again, terrified of the future where Granny would only exist in her memories

“I love my Nelly too!” Granny stroked Cornelia’s head gently, humming a lullaby to lull her to sleep, just like when she was a child.

Chapter 778

After her father’s death, Cornelia couldn’t sleep at night. Even when she did manage to doze off, nightmares would jolt her awake. Only when she was nestl ed in her grandma's arms, listening to her lullabies, could she get a bit more sleep.

"Grandma..."

"Mhm?"

"Grandma..."

"Nelly, I'm here..." Granny Rebecca knew what Cornelia was getting at. Every time she called out, Granny Rebecca would answer, doing everything she could to soothe her.

"Grandma, let's go to sleep.

"Alright, let's sleep"

Perhaps because she felt at ease, it didn't take long before Cornelia fell asleep.

Granny Rebecca looked at her resting face, lightly stroking it. "Silly girl, so many years have passed and you haven't changed a bit. When you're scared, you still want to sleep with grandma."

Granny Rebecca shifted slightly due to an uncomfortable sitting position, and this movement made Cornelia suddenly open her eyes and mumble,

"Grandma..."

"Grandma's here, Nelly dear. Go back to sleep."

"Grandma, you can't leave me alone, please..." In her dream, Cornelia was still murmuring, clutching tightly onto her grandma's clothes, scared that she would leave her.

"Silly girl Granny Rebecca sighed.

Maybe it was her grandma's scent, or the comfort of her embrace, but Cornelia slept deeply this time, only waking up in the afternoon. She opened her eyes to two huge faces in front of her, which made her jolt upright. "Grandma, Patricia, what are you guys doing here?"

Granny Luisa said, "This is the first time I've seen our Nelly sleeping. She's even pretty when she sleeps."

Patricia chimed in, "True that. Some people look pretty when they're awake but turn into a mess when they're asleep. But our Nelly is beautiful even in sleep."

Granny Luisa continued, "Especially those eyelashes of Nelly's, they're like little fans. And that face, so soft and rosy, I just want to pinch it....."

Cornelia didn't know whether to be angry or happy. "Granny, Patricia.."

Granny Rebecca scolded, "Luisa, enough with the teasing. You're making the poor kid blush"

"I'm not blushing. I'm scared! Imagine waking up to a bunch of faces hovering over you. Isn't that creepy?" Cornelia argued.

Granny Luisa thought for a moment, I suppose that could be a bit startling."

Patricia agreed, "Granny Luisa, we shouldn't do this anymore. We can't scare Nelly. If we give her a heart attack, Marc will have our hides."

At the mention of Marcus, Cornelia looked around. Not seeing him made her feel a bit disappointed. He had confessed his feelings, but now he was nowhere to be found. It would make sense if it was a workday, but it was Sunday and she knew he didn't have any plans.

"Nelly, are you looking for Marc?" Granny Luisa was quick to notice. "Marc has some things to handle. He'll come to see you after he's done."

"I'm not looking for him. With you and Patricia here, how could I possibly have time to look for him?" Cornelia retorted.

"Alright then, let's not talk about him. Patricia and the others have prepared a lot of delicious food. Get up, freshen up, and let's have a meal together." Granny Luisa suggested.

Cornelia checked the time. It was already close to two in the afternoon. "Grandma, haven't you guys eaten yet? Are you waiting for me? You don't have to go ahead, don't starve yourselves."

“We wouldn’t be so foolish If we were hungry, we would have eaten. We’re not waiting for you specifically. We just had a late breakfast, so we aren’t hungry yet. That’s why we’re waiting for you.” Granny Luisa explained.

Cornelia was speechless. Alright, they were all sharp as tacks. She was the only slowpoke here.

Chapter 779

After finishing up in the bathroom, Cornelia saw Patricia had already set up a dining table next to her grandma’s sick bed, loaded with all sorts of food. There was a wide variety of foods, including light dishes suitable for the sick, and some spicy dishes that Cornelia loved. Just by looking at these foods, you could tell Patricia put a lot of thought into it. She really treated Cornelia and her grandma like her own family Especially towards Cornelia, Patricia was even nicer to her than her own daughter It was as if only by giving her the best things in the world could she fulfill her wish.

The night before, Granny Luisa had prepared many gifts for Cornelia, and Patricia also had gifts for her, only they were at the Celestial Chateau mansion and could only be seen when Cornelia returned.

Patricia first served Granny Rebecca a bowl of soup, reminding her, “Granny Rebecca, the soup is still a bit hot. Wait a couple of minutes before drinking it. Don’t burn yourself”

“Okay” Granny Rebecca glanced at Patricia, “Thank you for taking care of Nelly this past year.”

Patricia felt very guilty after hearing this, “Granny, in fact, I only found out a few months ago that Nelly is Marcus’ wife. And she seldom stays at Celestial Chateau. I hardly get a chance to care for her.”

Granny Rebecca comforted her, “It’s the thought that counts.”

Patricia immediately responded, "Granny Rebecca, don't worry, I'll take good care of Nelly. I'll also help her take care of her children in the future."

Like the two grannies, Patricia also hoped that Cornelia could have a child soon, so the house would be a lot livelier, not just a place to live.

Hearing

this, Granny Rebecca was very pleased, "With you helping out, I can rest easy"

Granny Luisa chirped in, "I can take care of the baby, you don't need to worry"

Patricia replied, "Then let's have twins, we can each take care of one."

Granny Luisa added, "Rebecca will definitely want to help as well. If only Nelly could have triplets, that would be great. We could each raise one, and the house would certainly be lively."

Granny Rebecca still worried about her granddaughter, "Let's forget about triplets, Nelly is so frail, having three babies would be too hard."

Cornelia quickly changed the subject, "Grannies, Patricia, shall we eat first?"

"Good, Nelly is hungry, let's eat first. Granny Luisa said happily.

At the dining table.

Granny Luisa served Cornelia some food, "Nelly, try this."

Patricia served Cornelia some soup, "Nelly, start with some soup."

Granny Rebecca served Cornelia some food, "Nelly, this is your favorite, eat more."

Cornelia's bowl was quickly filled, she hurriedly said, "Grannies, Patricia, hold up!"

They all looked up at her, "Cornelia, is there a problem?"

Cornelia pointed to her bowl of food, "You guys eat too. Don't just take care of me, okay?"

Granny Luisa smiled, "We're eating too."

Patricia said, "It's okay, you go ahead. Seeing you happy makes us happy"

Granny Rebecca said, "You're still growing, you should eat more."

24 and still growing? Cornelia felt helpless, "Are we mixing up our roles here? Granny is the one who needs care, we should be concerned about her. I can eat, sleep, run, and I look healthy, I don't need your special attention."

Patricia said, "Of course, we're also looking after Granny Rebecca, but that doesn't stop us from caring about you."

Chapter 780

Granny Luisa nodded, "Yup!"

Comelia didn't respond

She had a hearty meal under the watchful eyes of the three elders, she was so stuffed that she was even struggling to walk

After the meal, Granny felt fine and wanted to go home to rest. Cornelia consulted with the doctor, who told her that Marcus had previously informed him to abide by Granny Rebecca's wishes. If Granny Rebecca wanted to rest at home, then they would go home and the doctor would accompany them.

Despite feeling a tad embarrassed about inconveniencing others, Cornelia prioritized her grandmother's comfort. Nothing was more important than Granny Rebecca's well-being

Once they arrived back at the Hartley's old mansion, Granny Rebecca felt a bit tired and dozed off shortly after lying down on her bed.

With nothing else to do after her granny fell asleep, Cornelia took out her phone and messaged Marcus: [What are you up to?]

Quite a while passed without a reply from Marcus.

After giving it some thought, Cornelia sent another message: [Granny and I are back at the Hartley Mansion. When are you coming home?]

A few seconds after she sent the message, Marcus finally replied: [Meet me outside]

Cornelia asked: [Are you back?]

Marcus replied. [Yep.]

Cornelia quickly got up and dashed outside, phone in hand.

Patricia was in the process of handing her some fruit and nearly got knocked over, “Nelly, where are you rushing off to? I just cut some fruit, have some.”

“Patricia, I’m good. You and granny have it. Cornelia replied without turning back and ran off.

Patricia watched her disappear, “What’s the hurry?”

“She’s obviously off to see Marc. Granny Luisa said, sunning herself by the French windows and noticing Marcus’s car parked outside, “Marc must be taking Nelly out on a date.”

Patricia added, “Looking at the way Nelly bolted, she’s like a gust of wind. Definitely off to see her beau”

Granny Luisa chuckled, “True that. Back in my day, I used to run out to greet my husband when he returned from a business trip.”

Patricia mused, “So, Nelly must have feelings for Marc.”

Granny Luisa replied, “Of course, who wouldn’t? Marc is such a catch, not many girls could resist him.”

Patricia moved closer to Granny Luisa and handed her a fork, “Granny Luisa, have some fruit first.

Granny Luisa sighed, "Nelly's in the car and Marc's driving off. I wonder where they are heading to. Do you think we might hear some good news soon?"

Patricia pondered, "Maybe they are heading to the Celestial Chateau? If so, should I go there to take care of them?"

Granny Luisa dismissed the idea, "Marc promised me he'll stay with Nelly at the mansion for at least half a month, he wouldn't dare take her away now." Patricia agreed. "So, they must be going on a date somewhere else. After all, it's not convenient to do anything at home with so many people around."

Granny Luisa accepted this explanation.

Meanwhile, Cornelia was sprinting out of the house towards the yard. Even from a distance, she could already see Marcus.
