

Bogus Billionaire (Shining Riviera)

Chapter 306

The three doctors looked at Sean. They appeared unscathed because the wounds were hidden under their clothes. And as a doctor, Sean knew how to avoid the vital parts.

The three of them had suffered a lot in Sean's presence, so they didn't have the gall to lie.

They scrambled to answer immediately. "Ms. Layla isn't sick She forced me to fake her medical records and checklists. Mr. Eddy, I don't know anything. I was forced to do this

Eddy couldn't listen to the doctors' explanations at all. His mind was buzzing. Only one revelation was going through his mind right now:

Layla wasn't sick. She wasn't ill at all —

He slowly turned his head like a broken doll and looked at Layla with dull eyes. He asked, "Why? Why did you do this?"

Layla had considered the possibility that Eddy would one day discover the truth. However, since the outside world couldn't know about what was going on in prison, she took the opportunity to lie and say that she was cured of her illness. She thought her plans were perfect, but

She glared at Caroline hatefully. She bit the inside of her cheek. The pain calmed her down instantly. She took a deep breath. Her tears rolled down her cheeks as she explained. "Ed, let me explain —"

As she said that, she tried to grab Eddy's hand, but he ruthlessly ripped it away. "So... you really lied to me, didn't you?" He looked down and fixed his eyes on Layla.

Layla felt like she had been dragged into the dark abyss of despair. She really wanted to get out of this predicament.

However, if she lied again, even with the cold, hard facts in front of her, it would only make Eddy more disappointed in her. She firmly grasped Eddy's clothes and shakingly replied, "Y—yes —

Eddy's expression shifted several times, and he clenched and unclenched his fists.

a long while, he pushed Layla away and strode toward the door.

actions caught Layla off guard, and she fell to the ground, making a loud noise. However, he never looked back, not even once.

Seeing this, Layla knew that Eddy was upset, and there was no point in acting miserable. She quickly got up from the ground and caught up with Eddy.

The lively meeting room immediately turned quiet. Caroline and Sean looked at each other, enjoying the show that had occurred.

"I'll be taking my leave," Sean said. He nodded at Caroline and walked out of the room.

At this time, everyone had recovered from their shock, and some people even recognized Sean.

"Was that man Sean Yates?"

"I think so. I heard Mr. Eddy had invited him from abroad to treat Layla's illness some time ago."

"What's his relationship with Caroline?"

"I don't know. They seem to be — friends."

"No way. Caroline actually knows a genius doctor!"

Evans Group's senior management whispered among themselves and looked at Caroline with shock and fear.

Caroline got up and scanned the crowd. She asked. "So, I'll be the new CEO of this company. Are there any objections?"

No one in the meeting room dared to say anything.

“All right. Since there are no objections, you all may leave. Business will be as usual. I’ll officially start work tomorrow.” After a while, there was sparse applause in the meeting room. Luke and Tom, who supported Layla, left with a huff.
