

In the depths of the Black Jail.

Lana was in her own room and she was very calm.

A person at her level would not do anything out of place even when faced with impending death.

The elegance of an aristocrat was something she was born with, and not something that she was trained to do.

She was still thinking about the man who visited her the other day. Who was he? He said he was coming to save her, but told her to wait until the Yamaguchi Syndicate themselves sent her out of here.

Wasn't that simply ridiculous?

If they were willing to let her go so easily, then why would they go through so much trouble to capture her?

What a joke.

Why did Lance find someone who only knew how to brag to come and save her?

She didn't think too much about it because she felt that this wasn't realistic at all.

DOONG DOONG DOONG.

Just then, someone came knocking on her door.

Was someone here with her meal?

Was it going to be rice with eel again today?

She opened the door to find herself face to face with aggressive and fierce looking bodyguards.

“What do you want?” asked Lana.

She had a bad feeling about this.

“Miss Lana, we’re here to escort you out.”

Lana wondered if she was hearing things.

“What did you say? Escort me out?”

“That is correct. The Chief has given orders for us to send you out safely and nothing must go wrong. Please come with us.”

These bodyguards had watched Kumada kneel earlier and knew what this command meant.

“Am I hearing this wrongly? You’re sending me out?” Lana’s face was filled with disbelief.

“Miss Lana, please quickly come with us, we must not delay,” said the bodyguards with a nod.

They pulled the door open and stood to one side so that Lana could walk out.

Lana was a little hesitant. She didn't know if these men were joking with her, or if they were going to attack her. But if they wanted to attack her, they didn't need such a lame excuse.

She walked out from the room and the bodyguards followed behind her. They looked very cautious and a little wary.

They didn't know how this woman was related to Jiang Ning, but since she was someone mentioned by Jiang Ning, she was definitely no ordinary person!

Lana decided to believe them and walked out from the Black Jail. Nobody stopped her at all.

She continued walking all the way out of the headquarters and she felt like she was dreaming.

What that man said turned out to be true after all.

The Yamaguchi Syndicate was seriously sending her out themselves.

"Where are we going now?" she asked the bodyguards.

"We're going to the main shrine in Tokyo," said the bodyguard as his team checked their surroundings carefully and were behaving extremely carefully.

Lana got into the car and the rest of the bodyguards immediately shut the doors. They checked the area around them carefully and made sure there was nothing dangerous or suspicious around them.

That was their mission.

Lana was even more confused and had no idea what could have happened to make the syndicate change their minds and allow her to leave.

She just knew that it definitely had something to do with that Jiang Ning!

The car drove off and headed for the shrine.

A small black car revved up its engine from behind and immediately followed after them.

“This Kumada is a pretty scheming one. Where is he sending Lana to?” Jimmy kept an eye on the car in front. “Mr Fang Yin, that’s the woman.”

“I’ll tell you honestly – that woman has one of the manual’s pages.”

“As long as you can capture her, you’ll get one

page of the manual!”

Fang Yin’s eyes immediately gleamed brightly.

He didn’t care who Lana was or where she came from. He only cared about whether she had the Extreme Fist Technique Manual on her or not.

As long as she had a page on hand, he was going to take action.

He didn’t care if he had to capture or even kill her, as long as he got what he wanted!

“I don’t care where they’re taking her. She’s going to land in my hands in the end!” snarled Fang Yin nastily as he watched the car in front.

Fang Yin's gaze became icy. "Follow them!"

The car immediately sped up and kept a certain distance from the car in front.

Once there was a suitable opportunity, they would take action.

Lana had no idea that someone was following her from behind. She was still wondering about what had happened and who Jiang Ning was. How did he manage to pull this off?

Jimmy's car continued to follow behind at a distance.

"The fighters in the car in front are very wary, and there are other fellow fighters protecting them in the darkness, so it's not easy to find a chance," spat Jimmy angrily as he clenched his teeth.

They were in the Yamaguchi Syndicate's territory after all, so Jimmy didn't dare to make an attack so rashly.

If he was going to take action, he had to succeed on the first try and then leave Tokyo in the quickest time possible, otherwise, they could all forget about ever leaving again.

Meanwhile.

Inside the shrine.

Lance was pacing up and down with anxiety written all over his face. He simply couldn't just sit and wait.

"Why isn't she back yet?"

He had received a call from Jiang Ning to say that the syndicate was sending his sister back, and he was so excited.

He had come to Tokyo for several days now but didn't know what he could do at all. His family didn't respond at all even though he had called them several times now.

Relying on his clan to rescue her was pointless.

"Sit down and wait, don't be anxious," said Lin Yuzhen. "Jiang Ning said they're sending her back, so they're definitely doing that now."

Since Jiang Ning said so, she believed it with all her heart.

Even if Jiang Ning said Lana would come back on a spaceship, Lin Yuzhen would believe him.

"I know, I know," said Lance as he continued to pace the room. He would look at the main gate from time to time to see if she was back yet, but there was still no sound after some time.

"Do you think an accident has happened?" he couldn't help but ask as he hung his head.

“What a foul mouth you have.” Sugita glanced at him. “Can’t you say something nicer? She’s your sister.”

Lance’s face reddened. “I’m just saying.”

“There are some things you shouldn’t say,” retorted Sugita.

Why was this idiot just spouting nonsense like that?

Wasn’t he supposed to be from an aristocratic family? Didn’t he know how to say nice things?

Sugita turned to look at Jiang Ning.

“Kumada will really send her back her obediently?”

He was sure that Kumada was scared of Jiang Ning. Once Kumada realized who Jiang Ning was, he would definitely be on his best behavior.

But at the same time, Kumada was just a spokesperson and was just a puppet chief. The one truly in power of this syndicate was someone else. Otherwise, there was no way the royal family would have allowed the Prince to be part of it.

It was all for the sake of gaining power.

“If he doesn’t want to die, he’ll send her back,” said Jiang Ning calmly.

DOOONG!

The gong outside resounded and Sugita immediately got up. “She’s really here!”

He had told his men to sound the gong once she reached so that they would know.

Nobody knew what Kumada might be up to and whether he might try any other tricks. Sugita had already set everything up ahead of time.

If Kumada didn’t follow Jiang Ning’s instructions, he was going to release the photos of Kumada begging for mercy on his knees, and make sure his reputation went down the drain!

He would make sure that Kumada’s reputation was ruined before the Prince’s!

When the gong sounded, Lance ran out even more quickly than Sugita.

Jiang Ning and Lin Yuzhen exchanged glances and got up as well.

“Let’s go out and have a look too.”

Lana got out of the car outside the shrine and saw that they were at the Yamaguchi

Syndicate's main shrine. She had no idea why she was brought here.

As the gong sounded, Kumada's bodyguards were also puzzled as to what was happening.

"They're going into the shrine," Jimmy noticed Lana standing at the entrance to the shrine. "If you don't take action now, you might not get a chance!"

He looked at Fang Yin.
